Bill to Revise Court Signed By President, Capital Belief

White House Statement on Measure to Be Issue Today.

Proposal Revamps Lower Benches

Roosevelt Declines to Comment on Farley, Guffey Speeches.

By Franklyn Waltman.

President Roosevelt, it is generally believed, last night signed the so-called court bill, which was passed after the collapse of his effort to reorganize the Supreme Court. This bill revises Federal judicial procedure, but does not provide for any additional judges.

Whether the President affixed his signature to the bill, however, was not to be definitely known until today when the White House intends to announce the action taken and to issue an explanatory statement. Unless Mr. Roosevelt acted on the bill before last midnight it would automatically die, since the ten-day period given to the President in which to approve Congressional enactments expired at that hour.

The President declined to discuss his proposed action at a press conference late in the day and White House attaches remained just as secretive, except to assert that Mr. Roosevelt would "act on the bill" before midnight. The action taken, however, was not to be announced until today when a statement will be issued, it was explained.

Veto Doubted.

None expected Mr. Roosevelt to veto the measure, although it was conceded he would find little pleasure in signing it. Indeed, none could think of a single valid reason he might give to support a veto, since the measure embodies procedural ideas included as a minor part of the President's judiciary reorganization message to Congress of last February 5.

Moreover, this bill resulted from an agreement made by the Administration leaders on Capital Hill with the opponents of the Supreme Court reorganization proposals.

Those who speculated on the unexplained failure of the White House to reveal what the President had done in regard to this message, believed he wished to use this opportunity to disclose his attitude toward a continuance of his fight for reorganization of the Supreme Court.

It was hinted that due to the pressure of requirements resting on the President in approving a score or two of bills passed by the last Congress, he did not have time yesterday to put the finishing touches on the statement he desired to issue in connection with the court legislation. There was no hint, however, whether Mr. Roosevelt intended to serve notice that his fight must go on.

Declines Comment.

At his press conference, he avoided questions as to his attitude on the speech delivered last Friday night by Senator Joseph F. Guffey, (Democrat), Pennsylvania. Guffey called for defeat of Senators opposing the court reorganization plan and specifically named Senators Wheeler, Burke, O'Mahoney and Holt in that connection.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether the Guffey speech or the address of Postmaster General Farley, delivered at the same time and promising no reprisals, represented his viewpoint. Mr. Roosevelt replied he had read neither. Further questioning brought no comment.

G.O.P. Leaders Predict Gains In '38 Election

Hamilton and Party's Heads Cite 'Slipping' of Roosevelt.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Republican elephant yesterday shuffled to its feet, stretched an emaciated hide, raised high its trunk and trumpeted a 1938 election warning.

Sitting astride were John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Committee chairman, and Republican State chairmen and officials from 14 States, meeting here to appraise the party's political prospects.

With one voice they agreed President Roosevelt is "slipping plenty" politically, and with ordinary luck the Republican Party might look forward to material gains in the Seventy-sixth Congress.

Following a full day of conferences on issues, finances and a campaign course of action, an optimistic Hamilton received reporters, removed his glasses, tapped them thoughtfully on their case, and said:

"There has been a substantial change of sentiment, based primarily, we believe, on the Supreme Court issue and the Administration's vacillation on the labor issue. There is a general feeling of unrest caused by these two questions."

Cites Failure.

By the labor issue, he said he meant "the President's failure to take a stand for law and order" and his "plague on both your houses" statement.

He said all State chairmen present

1 Slain, 15 Escape, Buildings Burned In Bahamas Riots

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 24 (AP).—The colonial government, after five days of silence from Great Inagua, learned today of rioting there which brought widespread destruction and the death of one man.

Boarding the Royal Netherlands steamer Medea as she entered the harbor, Haitian Consul Arthur Symonette sent British authorities here their first information since a radio appeal for help at Great Inagua was abruptly interrupted last Thursday.

Josiah Erickson, of Swampscott, Mass., American co-owner of Inagua's $500,000 salt industry, was forced to put to sea last Friday with 14 other persons, including the British commissioner, but reached Cuba safely in their small motor boat.

The salt works, Consul Symonette said, were burned along with the commissioner's official residence and the government wireless station. A man named John Monroe was killed.

The refugees were detained by army officials tonight after being picked up at the small port of Cananovas.

The refugees said they had drifted for four days without food or water.

Pearsons Embark For U. S. With Boy

Southampton, England, Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Drew Pearson, Washington newspaper columnist, and his wife sailed for New York tonight aboard the French liner De Grasse with Mrs. Pearson's 5-year-old son, whom they seized from his father after a surprise airline trip to the Channel Islands.

Roosevelt Mum On Outlook for Extra Session

Barkley, Rayburn Noncommittal After Lunch With President.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt has not yet made up his mind to call a special session of Congress for this fall, he said yesterday.

Six Congressional leaders saw him at intervals at the White House yesterday. Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, said: "We had an awfully good lunch and we exchanged pros and cons on lots of things, including the special session."

Schwellenbach for Session.

House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, said:

"We did have a good lunch and I'm mighty anxious to get back down to Texas and see how my cows are doing."

Senator Lewis Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, said he had told the President, "We ought to have a special session if we can get farm legislation ready."

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas; Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, and Representative John Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, also saw the President.

Intimates of Barkley and Rayburn said both had gone to the White House to advise the President against a special session, and ask for a legislative breathing spell.

Silent on Cotton Loan.

But in Alabama, Speaker William B. Bankhead, and in New York, Senator Joseph Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, predicted a fall session, the Associated Press reported.

The President gave no indication whether he favored a 9 or 10-cent per pound loan for cotton. He had been urged by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace to set the loans at the lesser figure, with a 3-cent-a-pound subsidy to co-operating farmers, and by cotton belt statesmen to fix the loans at the larger figure, with a 2-cent-a-pound subsidy.

Paper Says British Call Envoy Home

London, (Wednesday), Aug. 25. (AP).—Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States, has been summoned here from Washington and was to sail today for England, the Daily Express said today.

Robert W. Bingham, United States Ambassador to London, went home suddenly last week.

The Express said both ambassadors were called in by their governments to facilitate talks concerning Anglo-American relations.

Sir Ronald Lindsey's visit to London is "simply his normal summer leave-of-absence," Philip Broad, second secretary of the British Embassy, told The Post last night.

The State Department several days ago denied that Ambassador Robert W. Bingham's return from London is upon state business.

Franco Springs Mountain Trap On 50,000 Foes

Rebels Claim Santander Will Fall in 48 Hours; Town Nearby Taken.

By the United Press.

With the Nationalists storming Santander, Aug. 24.—A column of Navarre monarchists seized the key town of Torrelavega, 11 miles southwest of Santander, and drove 50,000 loyalist troops into a mountain-rimmed trap tonight.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco's officers predicted Santander would fall in 48 hours.

The Navarre Carlists swarmed into Torrelavega from the Viernoles mountainsides while two other columns advanced along their flanks.

Main Highway Cut.

The insurgents, smashing the enemy's last-stand defense of Santander, drove on through the town and cut the main highway between Santander and Gijon, Asturian capital.

The capture of the highway terminus cut off the last avenue of escape for 50,000 loyalists in the Cantabrian Mountains south of Santander, rebel headquarters said.

[Government sources claimed fierce infantry attacks, supported by fleets of tanks and large masses of artillery and aviation, had shaken the semicircle of insurgent forces which they admitted were tightening their pressure on Santander, the Associated Press reported.

[Government troops holding fortified positions north of Los Corrales, 7 miles from Torrelavega, announced through loudspeakers, "We

Janitor to Charge Beatings And Deny Slaying L St. Widow

At a coroner's inquest this morning William (alias Major) McAfee, accused colored slayer of Mrs. Henrietta Anderson, will testify the confession which police intend to use against him was obtained under duress, and that he was drunk when he made it, his counsel said.

He will claim he was beaten by police and that his back is still sore from the third degree session.

His attorney, retained yesterday, is Robert I. Miller.

Meanwhile police were not sure but what McAfee might also be implicated in the death of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, who was killed under similar circumstances near the residence of Mrs. Anderson at 1633 L street northwest.

For this crime Norman Robinson, colored, was sentenced to the electric chair and now awaits execution. Robinson was convicted partly on evidence supplied by McAfee.

McAfee yesterday denied any hair belonging to Mrs. Anderson was found in a basement sink drain, as claimed by police. He also asserted there was no blood found on his clothing, as detectives said.

McAfee will contend that Mrs. Anderson chased him into an alley, brandishing an ice pick, and declares he has two witnesses to substantiate him who will appear at the inquest at the morgue today at 11 a. m.

Funeral services for the slain mother of three children will be held tomorrow noon at a Chambers undertaking establishment, followed by burial at Arlington Cemetery.

Veterans' Administration employes were "shocked and indignant," according to Inez M. Pugh, of the bureau's publicity office, at insinuations in McAfee's confession.

Device to Land Planes in Fog Or Dark Announced by Army

A device which automatically lands planes in heavy fog, absolute darkness, or adverse wind conditions has been developed by the Army Air Corps, the War Department announced yesterday.

Aboard the plane at the time of the successful landing tests, just completed at Dayton, Ohio, were Capt. Carl J. Crane, Capt. George V. Hollerman and Raymond Stout.

The automatic landings, which were made without any direction by a human being either in the air or on the ground, were surprisingly accurate, Air Corps officials said.

Every automatic landing pilot, other than this, must receive constant attention from a human being.

Another automatic pilot is used by the British in their "Queen Bee" experiments in which the plane is remotely controlled in flight and landed by an observer either on the ground or in the air, who must be able to see the radio controlled plane.

In the recent tests, Air Corps officials asserted, the plane's occupants "were nothing more than interested passengers, since no human hand touched a control once the automatic features were placed into operation."

The landing switch was closed over Dayton, Ohio, and from that instant until the final roll of the airplane on the runway at Patterson Field, Ohio, not one control was touched by the airmen on board.

With the exception of the gyro pilot, all of the electro-mechanic elements of the new device were designed by technicians of the Air Corps at Wright Field.

2,000,000 Flee.

By John R. Morris,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Shanghai, Wednesday, Aug. 25.—At least 2,000,000 persons have fled their homes to escape the ruthlessness of war in this area which, experts agree, is only a prelude to what is coming in North China.

Thousands of others have died as they attempted to flee—caught by bombs, shells or flames as they sought safety.

The struggle here, which began on Friday, the thirteenth, has made the settlement streets run with foreign and Chinese blood.

But this war is only a sideshow compared to the impending strife soon to thunder over North China, according to indications in uncensored dispatches from many points.

Worst Yet to Come.

These dispatches confirm foreign military opinion here—that Japan's gigantic drive to make China's five northern provinces safe for Japan's military strategists and far-seeing industrialists will follow conclusion of the Shanghai skirmish.

The Shanghai adventure, despite the carnage, is only an incident—to use a word long popular among Oriental diplomats—in the war.

It is not even a major incident, although it consumes more space in the world press than that more important third act on which the curtain soon will rise.

The Shanghai carnage and destruction has served China by diverting temporarily Japan's attention from the main goal in the north and dramatically attracting notice to China's plight.

But even a decisive victory in this area will have relatively slight military value.

The view that China is merely feinting against Japan in the Shanghai area is supported by the absence of China's heavy artillery.

No Criticism of Chiang.

This implies no military criticism of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He is believed to be succeeding at minimum cost in diffusing Japanese efforts and retarding the Japanese offensive to the north. Meanwhile he has rushed every available man and gun to those Hopei, Chahar and Shantung fronts, where the real Sino-Japanese war will be fought.

That war, according to the most reliable observer here, will be a spectacle beyond description.

Some neutral opinion is that the 100,000 Japanese troops already in north China, in addition to the 150,000 reliably reported to be in Manchukuo, will be able to march through the five northern provinces almost as easily as Japan's soldiers marched through Manchuria and Jehol in 1932.

Attack at 7 Points.

By H. R. Ekins,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Aug. 25.—Japan's mighty military machine was thrown into a general attack on 750,000 Chinese at seven points along a line 1,000 miles long today.

The Japanese struck by land, sea and air.

The Japanese attacked in force at Shanghai, supported by heavy fire from the third battle fleet crowded into the Whangpoo River from Shanghai to the mouth of the Yangtze. Japanese warships in Shanghai harbor opened a terrific bombardment on Pootung after Chinese batteries there dropped shells close to the Idzumo, flagship of the Nipponese squadron.

Japanese patrol planes bombed the industrial area systematically in hopes of silencing the hidden guns.

Prepare Defense.

American and British authorities, anticipating a rush of armed Chinese troops into the International Settlement should they be defeated, prepared today to defend the settlement with machine guns and artillery. Plans were rushed for a general evacuation.

Japanese troops struck with savage fury from the north and east in an attempt to drive the Chinese out of the devastated city. Thousands of regular home army soldiers began a general march along all roads to Shanghai from Woosung, Lotien and Taitsang to the north. Casualties were heavy as Chinese contested every foot of the way.

Other troops poured off transports into Pootung. A third Japanese column was reported to have landed at Hangchow Bay, south of Shanghai.

Kalgan Captured.

Chinese advanced to within 12 miles of Tientsin and were menacing headquarters of the Japanese Gen. Kiyoshi Katsuko. The Chinese Twenty-ninth Route Army claimed 1,000 Japanese were killed or wounded and that Chinghai had been recaptured.

Widely separated cities, including Ningpo, 60 miles south of Shanghai in Chekiang province; Nanking, the Chinese capital to the northwest of Shanghai; Anking, the capital of Anhwei province; Tatungfu, far to the north on the border of Shansi and Suiyuan province, and Kalgan,

BAR EXAMS

Sen. Guffey Assails Steel Industry for Fight Against C.I.O.

'Personalities' Studied Aim of Board, He Says

Industrial Organization Is 'Definite Success' He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 24.—Senator Joseph F. Guffey tonight declared industrial unionism had proved "a definite success in industrial America" and denounced those "economic royalists" of the steel industry who had refused to sign contracts with the C. I. O.

Asserting many indications pointed to national coordination of what he called a "highly financed propaganda campaign against the C. I. O. and the labor movement in general," the Pennsylvania Democrat said:

"It seems to me that the present anti-union campaign is simply the same element which about a year ago was preparing to launch its pre-election attacks on President Roosevelt."

Predicts More Liberal Party.

Guffey, who last week assailed Senatorial opposition to the President's court bill and who is credited by many with an understanding of the Administration's policies, spoke on the eve of his departure for Europe.

Before going to the broadcasting studio Guffey predicted a "new, more liberal Democratic party" would make itself felt in the 1938 Congressional campaigns. Ridiculing talk of a "third party" movement, he said:

"All liberal elements will rally under the Democratic party instead of forming a third party."

He also predicted, in an interview, a special session of Congress in November would pass the wages and hours, anti-lynching and farm loan bills.

His speech tonight was devoted principally to a castigation of the anti-union campaign, manifestations of which he said included full page advertisements by "alleged citizens committees," the "'back to work' movements, the vigilante committees, and the improper influencing of authorities to use violence against strikers."

Assails "Municipal Control."

He cited as a "most horrible example of how industry controls some municipal authorities" the recent testimony before a National Labor Relations Board that the Republic Steel Corporation supplied the police of Massillon, Ohio, with guns and ammunition and caused the appointment of hand-picked special police.

Asserting the labor movement was given new life when it found expression of its power in backing the New Deal, Guffey said:

"There is a new era coming in labor-capital relationship."

He cited what he termed the "far-seeing statesmanship" of the officials of the 375 firms which he said had signed contracts with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, mentioning particularly Myron Taylor, chairman of the board of United States Steel Corporation: H. E. Lewis, chairman of the board of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation; Henry Romer, president of Pittsburgh Steel Co., and Henry D. Scott, vice president of Wheeling Steel Corporation.

"I prefer to believe that the officials of those concerns know as much about proper management in the steel industry as do Tom Girdler, of Republic Steel, or Frank Purnell, of Youngstown Sheet & Tube or any of the others who are fighting union organizations," he said.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—The National Labor Relations Board concluded today its hearing either to determine a collective bargaining agent or to order employe elections on 19 steamship lines. Decision was reserved.

Republican Chairmen Meet to Map Campaign

Republican State chairmen from 15 States gathered here yesterday with National Chairman John Hamilton to make arrangements for the 1938 campaign. They started work on the strategy by which they hope to win victory at the polls next year. From left, seated, John Tyrell, Illinois; John Hamilton, J. F. Thompson, Michigan; standing, E. D. G. O. P. Leaders, in Gathering Here, Forecast Gains in 1938, Declare Roosevelt Has Slipped felt the President's stand for Supreme Court reorganization also was influencing a Republican trend in many sections. He said this was having a stronger effect in small cities and communities than in the larger industrial centers.

The conference was strategically staged in the wake of a session of Congress that had repulsed the President on most of his measures and set a new high in Democratic dissension.

The meeting was the first of a series of Republican pow-wows to be held in different sections. In October, Hamilton said, will begin a tour of six to eight weeks through the West, New England and the South.

The Republican chairman thought the record of the Congress just adjourned supplied a good index to the President's present political popularity.

"Knows Sentiment."

"You have to presume a Congressman has some conception of what the feeling is in his district," he said. "I think that's a fair statement. The average Congressman doesn't go butting his head against the wall. And if you take the attitude Congressmen displayed last session, the President has slipped plenty."

Hamilton said very few State chairmen cared to evaluate gains they had made in precise figures, but were generally agreed Republicans at the present time could return a majority in those normally Republican districts that went Democratic in 1936 by a 3 or 4 per cent margin.

Between 30 and 35 Democratic House victories in the last election were so close, but Hamilton declined to predict how many House seats Republicans thought they could pick up.

He declared the "same trend" was evidenced in many districts lost by heavier votes.

Reporters questioned Hamilton on his proposed Southern tour, and asked what he hoped to gain by it.

"That is good Republican ground when they get upset," he replied. "Hoover carried eight States South of the Mason Dixon line. Harding carried 3, and Coolidge, 2."

Hamilton was ready with statistics when one reporter delicately broached the Republican Party's state of health, and Democratic forecasts of its demise.

"Larger Proportion."

"Do you think that's news," he laughed. "Well, the Republican Party got a lot more votes proportionately in 1936 than the Democrats did in 1920 or 1924.

"Does that sound like it died? President Roosevelt polled only 62 per cent of the total vote. Harding got 64 per cent and Coolidge 63."

Chairmen from 14 widely scattered States and committee secretaries from two States gathered at Republican headquarters here for morning and afternoon sessions in the first conference of its kind ever held. Finances, means of interesting Republican youth and available issues were discussed in a free exchange of Republican views.

Much Accomplished.

"We feel a lot was accomplished," said Hamilton. He declined comment when asked if he thought Republicans should support Democratic court plan opponents. And he said proposals for a national convention of Republican leaders were not discussed.

Optimistic forecasts were made by Republican officials present.

Lawrence Cobb, secretary of the California State committee, said "we are out after Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, and we think we can beat him." Cobb said California has a Republican State administration "and expects to keep it."

Ed D. Schorr, Ohio State chairman, said "everything indicates we will have a Republican Governor and United States Senator next year."

Sinclair Weeks, Massachusetts State chairman, said there is an "excellent chance" of electing a Republican to succeed the late Representative William P. Connery, and of picking up one additional Republican House seat in Massachusetts.

"On the Way Out."

Edward J. Samp, Wisconsin State chairman, declared "the Democratic Party is definitely on the way out in Wisconsin." He said Wisconsin Republicans who left their party because of admiration of President Roosevelt are returning to the fold.

Harlan J. Bushfield, South Dakota chairman, forecast a Republican "sweep" in his State. "Our farmers are much better off now than they were last year, thanks to a bounteous nature and lack of serious drought."

Other State chairmen present were Henry W. Jeffers, of West Virginia; C. R. Ahalt, of Virginia; Peirce Brereton, of Rhode Island; James C. Farmer, of New Hampshire; Lyle Jackson, of Nebraska; William S. Murray, of New York; James F. Thomson, of Michigan; F. G. Todd, of Kansas, and John F. Tyrrell, of Illinois. Two secretaries of State committees were present, Cobb and I. R. Dovel, of Virginia.

Hurricane Omens Off Florida Coast

Miami, Fla., Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Continued indications of a tropical disturbance in the Atlantic Ocean to the east of the Leeward Islands were reported today by the Federal hurricane warning system.

The apparent disturbance was "a considerable distance east of the Leeward Islands," the San Juan station of the system reported in a 2:30 p. m. advisory.

It was believed the storm would pass to the north of Puerto Rico, allaying fears which earlier caused a near riot in San Juan.

The pelt, inscribed with an invitation to attend the opening of Bonneville Dam, was given by the City of Vancouver. Schwellenbach also gave Mr. Roosevelt a book from Spokane, Wash., containing views of Grand Coulee Dam.

U. S. Aides Stir Envy and Hate, Thorpe Asserts

Nation's Business Editor Charges Inciting of Public to Cabinet Officials.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Aug. 24.—Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, assailed "Cabinet officials" tonight for statements he said "are inciting people to envy and hate."

In an address at a public meeting preceding the forty-eighth annual convention of the National Association of Life Underwriters, the editor attacked "demagogic slogans" with which "we belabor Wall street as the monopolistic source of our economic sinews."

"With all our intelligence, we cannot seem to realize that capital is merely the savings of the people collected by managements of which insurance is one, and brought to an effective focus where those savings are pumped into trade and industry," he said.

Thorpe, whose magazine is the official organ of the United States Chamber of Commerce, contended "the state of public thinking today, as never before, demands a new chapter in bold face type, a chapter that will explain the role of life insurance companies as unofficial reconstruction finance corporations; that life insurance dollars support the fundamental economic needs of American life."

"This basic economic fact is under fire everywhere and from unsuspected quarters," he added. "The agitation is bringing about a change in that the savings of the people, instead of going into creative enterprise that makes for continuous employment of labor, are diverted to government and expended upon noncreative enterprise and upon production which enters into competition with the people themselves.

"A Cabinet officials says we must not return to the 'vomit of capitalism.' Another speaks of 'the unregenerate adherents of the old order'

"Such phrses are popular. . . . They are inciting people to envy and hate; they are dulling their senses to the loss of independence through the inevitable alternative—state socialism."

Thorpe avoided direct reference to the Federal old age benefits program, expected to figure in reports and discussions during the insurance underwriters' sessions.

Byrd Collecting Data to Oppose Reorganization

Roosevelt Foes Prepare to Contest President's Idea of Bureau Reform.

By the Associated Press.

Congressional opponents of President Roosevelt's Government reorganization plan already are collecting new ammunition to use against the proposal, which may cause one of the major controversies of the next session.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, has begun a recess study of Federal agencies, to prepare a new campaign against the President's version of what should be done toward regrouping Federal bureaus.

The Virginia Senator, chairman of a special Senate committee on reorganization, charged the President's recommendations would concentrate too much power in the White House and would effect no real economies.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, joined him, asserting they were "as bad as the court plan" and ought to be rejected.

Byrd's committee has $15,000 out of its $35,000 expense account left to finance its studies.

The House passed a reorganization bill which trimmed some of the proposed Presidential powers.

The House bill, which got no action in the Senate, would give to the President authority for three years to rearrange Government departments. Independent regulatory agencies and some minor departments, however, would be exempt from the President's power to abolish, transfer and consolidate bureaus.

Conferees to Study Alaskan Air Route Bid of U. S., Canada

By the Associated Press.

Canada and the United States, each eager to control Alaska's profitable air lines, will settle the problem next October around a conference table.

The prize is a rich one, postal officials here say, for it involves the right to fly large shipments of gold, platinum and furs from Alaska's interior to the outside world.

The United States first became acutely aware of Alaska's pressing need for a regular service three year ago. Branch and other officials made flights to far-flung outposts. They quietly laid plans to inaugurate a weekly schedule from Juneau to Fairbanks via Whitehorse, Canada.

Doctor Gives His Blood To Save Girl Foundling

Beaver Falls, Pa., Aug. 24 (AP).—A physician gave his own blood today to save the life of a baby girl found on the doorstep of Frank Trill, a city employe.

Dr. Leonard S. Fullerton, realizing the child's critical condition, transfused his own blood because there was insufficient time to obtain a registered blood donor. The doctor said the 6½-pound infant had a good chance of surviving.

Labor Hearing Run to Publicize Roosevelt and Lewis, Steel Lawyer Charges

Attack Loosed At Propaganda Against Unions

Woman Accuses Weirton Firm of Charting Growths of C. I. O. Union.

By the Associated Press.

New Cumberland, W. Va., Aug. 24. A discharged woman janitor saw a chart in the office of General Manager T. S. Williamson on which Weirton Steel Co. traced activities of the steel union, she testified at a National Labor Relations board hearing today.

Mrs. Gertrude Long, a sister of Kenneth Koch, a C. I. O. organizer in Wierton, W Va., told of the chart soon after company counsel criticized the board for "personal politics" in its hearing on charges that the company coerced its 12,000 workers against joining the C. I. O.

"The board has apparently made a studied effort to get into the record of this case on every occasion possible the names of Roosevelt and John L. Lewis." declared William T. Fahey, attorney for the Weirton Steel employe representation plan. He added:

"Just because there has been a statement by John L. Lewis (chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization) that he will withdraw his support from Roosevelt if labor is not upheld is no reason for New Deal agencies to be used to give Lewis that support."

Trial Examiner E. G. Smith, a former West Virginia circuit judge, ordered Fahey's remarks stricken from the record.

Mrs. Long testified that the steel company kept a list of automobile licenses of steel workers who visited a filling station run by a man active in the union.

Police Move 11 Men.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 24 (AP).—A patrol wagon flanked by 25 policemen took 11 men out of the strike-bound Heppenstall Steel Co.'s plant today while several hundred spectators and pickets booed.

One brick was tossed, but nobody was struck.

Ten policemen mingled all day with the crowd at the plant's gate, where 13 men were injured yesterday in rioting.

William Hart, head of the S. W. O. C. local at the mill, withdrew most of the 700 pickets he had massed following the fight between strikers and four carloads of non-strikers headed by C. W. Heppenstall, jr., general manager of the company.

S. B. and Max Heppenstall remained in a hospital for treatment of minor cuts after a street fight.

Favoritism Charged.

Gadsden, Ala., Aug. 24 (AP).—The National Labor Relations Board was told today that the Etowah Rubber Workers Association solicited memberships in the Goodyear plant here while such solicitations by the United Rubber Workers, C. I. O. affiliate, were banned.

The union charged the Etowah group is company-dominated.

'Sit-Down' on Ship Draws U.S. Inquiry

New Orleans, Aug. 24 (AP).—Norman E. Merill, chairman of the United States Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, said today that a sit-down strike on the S. S. Seatrain, New York, would be investigated Thursday. The crew struck Wednesday.

The board is now investigating "the conduct of officers aboard the steamship Atlantic of the Argonaut line" when a strike was called July 30.

Newsless City Urges Printers to End Strike

Everett, Wash., Aug. 24 (AP).—Mayor A. C. Edwards informed the International Typographical Union today Everett citizens "urgently demand" immediate resumption of publication by two daily newspapers suspended because of a controversy with printers.

In a telegram to Charles P. Howard, president of the International Union, Edwards accused the printers of striking and refusing to accept "liberal wage offers" by publishers of the Everett Herald and the Everett News. The papers suspended publication August 19.

C. I. O. Growth Reported As Aiding Communists

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, said today two new Communist newspapers will be established January 1, 1938, one in Chicago and the other in San Francisco.

Israel Amter, State organizer for the party, said the growth of the Committee for Industrial Organization has increased interest in the Communist Party.

Martin Pleads For New Fight On Ford Plants

Urges U. A. W. to Pool Its Resources to Redouble Union Drive.

By the United Press.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 24.—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, tonight asked the union to pool its resources and strength for "redoubling" the campaign to organize the Ford Motor Co.'s 140,000 workers.

"No matter how much money it takes," Martin told wildly applauding delegates to the U. A. W.'s second annual convention, "I tell you we are going to organize Ford's workers because they deserve to be organized and because Henry Ford deserves a licking.

"We are going to carry the gospel of organization and drive out of this country that kind of policy which today predominates in the Ford Motor Co."

"Wooden-Headed Obstinacy."

The delegates cheered, stamped their feet and beat tables with clubs as Martin attacked Ford's labor policies as "a history of ruthless discrimination and wooden-headed obstinacy against recognition of the elementary rights of his workers."

Martin said the Ford organizational drive was proceeding satisfactorily and asserted "thousands of Ford workers" already are members of the U. A. W.

Disputed Cases Referred.

The compromise came on the recommendation of the Martin-controlled credentials committee for the unseating of nine delegates. Instead, the disputed cases were referred back to the committee for further hearing.

Before the committee reported, Ora Gassaway, of the United Mine Workers' executive board, pleaded with the delegates to put aside all factionalism. He said Lewis sent him to the convention.

Fiery debate broke out when the credentials committee returned a surprise report which asked only the unseating of eight delegates from a Flint (Mich.) local and of Stanley Novak, a delegate from Detroit's West Side local.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 24—Homer Martin's statement that the sit-down strike would remain "an effective weapon" for the United Automobile Workers drew a cry of "communism" tonight from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, a C. I. O. union, reported to his union's convention today that "the stay-in (sit-down) strike will remain an effective weapon against employers who refuse to recognize the moral and legal rights of workers to collective bargaining."

"In my opinion," he added, "it will remain labor's most effective weapon against the autocracy of industry."

Called "Cruel, Dishonest."

Green's comment:

"This statement made by Mr. Martin upholding the sit-down strike will, in my opinion, make it very difficult for the automobile workers to function as a collective bargaining agency.

"The leaders of an organization at least ought to have the courage and honesty to tell their members the truth. It is both cruel and dishonest to appeal to the passions and sentiments of men.

"I consider Mr. Martin's statement as evidence of the communist influence in the United Automobile Workers."

Green, at a press conference following today's A. F. of L. executive council session, also alleged a federation investigation had disclosed a large number of known Communists were on the C. I. O. pay roll in both the automobile and steel industries.

Disputes between member unions and routine business occupied the executive council meetings.

Earlier, militant factions in the United Automobile Workers Union forced a compromise from Martin in the first open fight on the U. A. W.'s convention floor.

Teachers' Vote Predicted.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 24 (AP).—A national referendum on proposals to affiliate with the C. I. O. was predicted by officials of the American Federation of Teachers tonight after a two-hour discussion behind locked doors at the twenty-first annual convention.

The discussion revolved around resolutions submitted by several local unions which want the convention to vote to join the C. I. O.

A plan to amend the federation's constitution to eliminate provision for mandatory A. F. of L. allegiance also has been offered.

C. I. O. proponents have indicated they would agree to the referendum.

School Changes in Arizona.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 24 (AP).—Herman E. Hendrix, State superintendent of public instruction, announced today State high school courses are to be "humanized" by elimination of foreign language requirements and reducing mathematics requirements.

4 Plead Guilty In Washington Bootleg Plot

Warrants Also Issued for 2 Missing Suspects in Liquor Case.

Four men out of 33 indicted pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of conspiring to violate the District of Columbia liquor taxing act, in a hearing before Justice F. Dickinson Letts in District Court.

John James Hawkins, William F. Smith, Richard Adams and Louis W. Wright entered pleas of guilty, while 23 others denied their guilt. Bench warrants for two who are missing were taken out, and three others who did not appear because of failure to notify them of the pending arraignments were given an additional week within which to appear.

The alleged conspirators were said to have been bringing approximately 1,000 gallons of untaxed liquor into the District weekly. Most of the product was distilled in nearby Maryland and Virginia and was brought to Washington, where it was retailed to persons of small means, officers said. An estimate of $200,000 in loss of taxes on the liquor was made by Government agents who worked for three months uncovering the operations of the ring.

Government attorneys said yesterday they hoped to be able to put the case up for trial early in the fall term of court.

Green Charges Marine Labor Strife to U. S.

Urges Maritime Board to Abandon Policy of Neutrality.

The American Federation of Labor holds the Maritime Commission "in a measure responsible" for the "destructive factionalism" now prevailing in maritime labor, William Green, A. F. of L. president, asserted yesterday in a letter to Joseph P. Kennedy, commission chairman.

Green urged Kennedy to abandon the commission's neutral attitude in the long-continuing fight between the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. maritime unions.

Green based his charges that the commission's neutral attitude was responsible for the continuance of the struggle on two points:

"The commission has refused to recognize that there is a vital and easily distinguishable difference between factions, i. e., (1) between the faction that has no regard for solemn agreements and the faction that honors amendments; (2) between those who advocate and practice sit-down strikes and the others who firmly oppose such methods of labor warfare in the maritime industry."

Asks Commission's Backing.

The letter, vigorously worded, concluded:

"Under the circumstances we contend that the Maritime Commission should not remain neutral but should frankly and courageously support and encourage that faction which has by its record and by its past and present conduct demonstrated its loyalty and its readiness to fight, if need be, for the maintenance and honest observance of agreements."

Meanwhile, the hearings continued before the commission in its study of maritime working conditions, wages and hours.

Paul Scharrenberg, legislative representative of the International Seamen's Union, A. F. of L. affiliate, told the commission satisfactory labor standards can not be fixed by a Government body, because the permanence of the standards can never be guaranteed.

"Some future commission may tear them down," he said.

E. M. Bull, president of the Bull Steamship Line, representing Atlantic coastwise ship operators, asked prevention of future sit-down strikes, but had no suggestions for means of preventing further outbreaks.

Charges Poor Leadership.

Joseph Murphy, representing the Marine Transport Workers of the Atlantic, an A. F. of L. affiliate, made a fiery ten-minute speech during the hearing in which he charged that "the trouble on the waterfront is poor leadership."

"They told me I had to join the Communist party. They offered me $150 a week to join it, but I couldn't, because I'm an Irishman.

"Lack of intelligence and forcefulness by our own Government is behind all this. Dictatorship has taken the reins over our shipping. You can't satisfy seamen. They want a Frigidaire in every room and a radio.

"We've got to break down the communist leadership in shipping unions."

Essig, 21, of Harrisburg, failed to negotiate a curve on the Caledonia-Pine Grove Furnace road, near Caledonia State Park, and struck a tree.

Girl, 8, Dies as Blood Dissolves Her Bones

Minneapolis, Aug. 24 (AP).—Mabel March died today after a nine weeks illness of an incurable disease that dissolved her bone structure into the bloodstream. Physicians concluded the disease was lymphatic leukemia and planned to perform a post mortem.

The 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. March, of Slayton, Minn., was brought to a hospital where it was found the marrow of her bones was being "eaten" away by the white blood cells as the red blood cells dwindled to one third normal.

Lightning Takes Toll of 13 in State

Richmond, Va., Aug. 24 (AP).—Summer electrical storms this year have taken the lives of at least 13 Virginians and injured many others, accidental death records showed today.

Lightning took its first victim in May, the State bureau of vital statistics reported, and claimed seven more in June, the latest month for which official figures are available.

At least five deaths by lightning, however, have been reported in August, including two in the vicinity of Danville, one at Brookneal, one at Vinton and one near Abingdon.

Warsaw, Poland, Aug. 24 (AP).—Anti-Jewish disorders in which two persons were killed and 75 injured today marked continuance of the peasants' strike. Since its outbreak there have been 49 deaths.

The two peasants were killed and 22 injured when they overturned a lorry containing vegetables, which a Jew tried to bring to Buczacz. A crowd of nationalists raided the Jewish market at Bransk, injuring 50 peddlers.

The Socialist Party is urging sympathetic general strikes tomorrow at Krakow, Bochnia and the Wieliczka salt mines to support the peasants' movement. Tarnow, a city of 50,000, was paralyzed by a sympathy strike today.

4 Named as 'Safe Gang' Held for Grand Jury

Judge John P. McMahon yesterday ordered four colored men, described by police as the "safe gang," held under $10,000 bond each for the grand jury.

These men were accused in Police Court of stealing a safe valued at $50 and $900 in cash from the Garden-T Shoppe. Other charges will be presented directly to the grand jury.

Child's Father Plans to Appeal Kidnap Charge

Californian Ordered to Face Charge, Plans to Fight Case.

Ordered back to California to face a charge of taking his 2½-year-old daughter from his divorced wife, awarded to her by Nevada Courts, Harry Leroy Anderson late yesterday in District Court announced plans for an immediate appeal to the United States Court of Appeals and was released on bond.

Anderson and his former wife, an attractive school teacher of San Luis Obispo, Calif., faced each other in court yesterday for the first time since the father took the child. Mrs. Anderson stated on the stand she had obtained a divorce in Nevada in 1935 and had been awarded custody of the child.

She appeared unaffected by the giving of testimony that may mean the return of her one-time husband to California and jail.

In his own defense, Anderson said he went to Mrs. Anderson's home and asked to take the child for a day. When he got her, he went to San Francisco—220 miles away, and then decided to come East with her. He finally settled in Takoma Park, Md., with the daughter and obtained a position, first having notified his estranged wife he was taking their child with him.

Mrs. Anderson flew here and after confronting Anderson's attorneys, was given the child. The proceedings yesterday were to determine if he was to be required to return to California to face a charge of taking his child.

Testimony attacking the validity of the Nevada decree was ruled out by Judge Letts, who held that the question involved was merely if Anderson was to be required to return to California and face a charge of taking his own child. The appeal from dismissal of the habeas corpus petition will not be heard for several months.

It's Our Family's Whiskey, neighbor—and it's sure Tasty and Mild!

Andy Koozer showing us where he does his hatching
This is me just as I was remarking to Andy how I never in my life heard such a peeping and a scratching as goes on in that house where he hatches out his baby chicks. Andy's chuckling and saying so far as he's concerned, he never heard more goings on than in The Wilken Family's bottling room!
Harry E. Wilken

Our Family's Whiskey has more new friends in Washington than Andy has chicks!

Joking with Andy Koozer the other day, I told him how all those coops full of chicks I see him trucking down to the depot for shipping aren't one two three with the number of cases of Our Family's Whiskey us Wilkens load in a day. Andy says "yes but the only mother all those chicks has got is me personally, but your whole family is turning out the whiskey!"

And Andy Koozer is right at that! Not just me and my brother William Wilken and my brother-in-law Tom, but Pa Wilken and Grandpa Wilken in the bargain—we've been putting all our heart into making fine whiskey the whole of our lives. And this is our own Family's Recipe, and I guess I'm safe in saying it's mighty seldom anybody tries it but what they declare it's the mildest and the tastiest whiskey they ever got a hold of!

Trucks Blaze As They Move On Santander

Government Gunners Harass Advancing Column With Accurate Barrage.

By Edward J. Neil,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

With Rebels on the Santander Front, Aug. 24.—A war correspondent might just as well be a soldier in Northern Spain.

Maybe it would be better. They have gas masks.

I went to the Santander front yesterday with the insurgent column of Spanish legionnaires that I have been following westward from Bilbao. We wound our way through some of the prettiest mountain scenery in the world. I scarcely noticed it.

About noon we were climbing through a section that resembled a miniature Grand Canyon. Our object was the tiny, but important, village of Alceda, snuggled in the rich valley on the River Pas. Road signs said "Santander—25 miles."

The road was thronged with tramping troops and trucks of ammunition and supplies strung back in a line like a train in the track-like wheel ruts.

Up ahead, government batteries in the pass suddenly start shelling—accurately.

Major Says Its Okay.

I am at the head of the column with the major in command. Suddenly there come ominous sounds from the rear. Men are running, shouting "truck afire! truck afire! Ammunition truck!"

A black smudge of smoke grows larger. It is a truck full of shells for the 75's.

"We'll get the trucks out ahead. It's okay," shouts the major.

Down the road, coming back from ahead, two motorcycles race helter-skelter.

"Gas shells! Tear shells!" the riders shout to the major.

The confusion is terrific as the soldiers scramble for gas masks. From the rear the burning truck's shells are beginning to explode. There is no way back, and I have no gas mask.

"Don't worry," reassures the major, disappearing into his mask. "There's a road ahead a hundred yards that leads off to the right where you will be safe from the gas."

He grins wickedly and adds, as he fixes his mouthpiece, "The road leads into enemy territory, but you might get through all right."

In a few minutes it is all over.

An hour later we are in Alceda. Five government bombers suddenly appear in the skies overhead. I duck for shelter.

Bombs rain down. A clump of three hurtling bombs strikes fire to a building 100 yards away. Then another clump hits right in the middle of our automobiles beside the road. Presto—four dead, seven wounded, four cars afire and a fifth riddled.

Shells Draw No Response.

Up the road beyond the village with the general in charge . . . I wonder if the town ahead is occupied. The general says we'll soon find out.

He calls up a mountain gun and sets it in the road. It is slippery there, where a shell fragment hit a soldier an hour earlier. The soldier is still lying there, his shoulder strap sheared off clean by a splinter that tore through his chest. His equipment is stacked carefully in the green grass under the shade of a big tree.

The mountain gun hammers four swift shots toward the town. No response. Tanks sweep by and the general follows in an automobile. I walk.

Down the road comes a squad of government soldiers, their rifles slung across their shoulders by their straps. They are surrendering.

An insurgent machine gunner is disgusted.

"Hell," he explodes in Spanish. "No action. These guys won't fight."

Japanese Fears China May Be 'Second Spain'

Tokyo, Aug. 24 (AP).—Siego Nakano, a minority party leader in the lower house of Parliament, told the government today that embattled China may become "a second Spain to benefit a certain foreign power."

Nakano, leader of the Tohokai, did not name the "power," but urged that the government pursue a "more drastic" policy in China to settle the issue "once and for all."

Mediterranean Expert Talked as Reich Envoy

Berlin, Aug. 24 (AP).—Baron Eberhard Von Stohrer, former German minister to Egypt, was mentioned today in semiofficial quarters as likely to be named the Reich's new ambassador to the Spanish insurgent regime.

Von Stohrer is an expert in Mediterranean affairs.

will conquer or die," insurgent officers said. They added that a bombardment and an infantry attack routed the government soldiers—Editor's note.]

Carlists Join Italians.

The rebel radio at Bilbao reported that Santander, terrorized by the increasing roar of Franco's artillery, had offered to surrender. The Santander civil governor, Jose Alvarez, resigned and fled, the radio said.

If Santander falls, Franco will control 32 of Spain's 47 provincial capitals and more than two-thirds of Spain.

The advance on Torrelavega began after Franco's Navarre requetes (monarchists) linked their columns to the Italians of his "Black Arrows" brigade.

Before morning, Franco's officers said, Santander's suburbs might be in range of their siege guns.

The nut-cracker offensive pressed in upon Santander from five directions.

Bombing Protest Delayed.

London, Aug. 24 (AP).—British naval authorities at Palma, on Spanish insurgent Mallorca Island, today were requested by the British foreign office to defer filing with insurgents a protest on the bombardment of the British freighter Noemijulia.

The delay was asked to give Britain time to determine the identity of the planes which unsuccessfully launched several bombs at the freighter off the Island of Corsica yesterday.

(Seventeen members of the crew of the Greek steamer Nagos arrived at Gibraltar from Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, where they said they had been held prisoners for eight weeks after their ship was confiscated by Spanish insurgents.)

Spanish insurgent airplanes harassed Spain's east coast from Rosas, near the French frontier, to within a few miles of Valencia. Reports from Valencia said four persons were killed, including a woman and child at Sagunta.

Rebels Shell Madrid.

Madrid, Aug. 24 (AP).—Insurgent batteries fired several hundred shells into the center of this besieged and war ravaged city tonight.

It was the first time in 18 days the former loyalist capital had been shelled. Government artillery replied with fire on insurgent positions outside the city.

200 Prisoners Taken.

Valencia, Aug. 24 (AP).—The defense ministry tonight said government troops broke the rebel lines between Tardienta and Belchite in three places at dawn today, taking 100 men and four cannons.

Insurgents in the Quinto sector were surrounded, the government claimed, when it cut communications linking Huesca and Zaragoza.

First of Refugees Arrives by Clipper

San Francisco, Aug. 24 (AP).—The undeclared war in China was described today as "terrible" by Mrs. James B. Murphy, wife of a New York pathologist, first refugee to reach California from the conflict in the Orient.

Mrs. Murphy arrived on the Hawaii Clipper and left by plane for the East. She escaped Peiping and traveled later down the Whangpoo from Shanghai while it was being bombed.

"On the way down the Whangpoo we were repeatedly fired on, but there were no casualties in our party," Mrs. Murphy said.

Mexican Oil Loss Feared by Britain

London, Aug. 24 (AP).—The British government instructed its minister at Mexico City today to make representations to the Mexican government concerning the position of foreign oil interests in the American republic.

Mexico will be asked to "clarify" its intentions in the matter of royalties, which, some sources said, have been placed on an "uneconomic level."

Certain foreign investors have expressed fear that Mexico intended a gradual nationalization of her whole industry, largely British and United States owned.

Alabat Islanders Back After Fleeing Quake

Manila, Philippine Islands (Wednesday), Aug. 25 (U.P.).—Hundreds of residents of Alabat Island returned to their home today after living outdoors in terror because of earthquakes.

Father Miguel Selga, director of the Manila Weather Bureau, assured them the small island would not disappear. Thirty-seven persons were injured and many buildings were damaged by earthquakes in the last three days.

U. S. Will Assist Citizens in China

The twin threats of hunger and disease in war-swept Shanghai caused the State Department yesterday to study means of protecting Americans there.

Secretary Hull said a $500,000 emergency appropriation made by Congress last week would be allocated for relief and refugee assistance after consular officials in China conferred with Red Cross administrators.

France Approves 'National' Railroad

Paris, Aug. 24 (AP).—An official spokesman indicated tonight that the cabinet of Premier Chautemps had agreed upon a modified nationalization of France's railroads.

Under the terms of the modification, the spokesman explained, the government will organize a national railroad corporation in which it would hold a majority of the voting stock. Ownership of the country's 26,000 miles of railway would be vested in the new corporation. Private shareholders of the present lines would retain a voice, though a minor one, in the management of the national corporation.

The cabinet adjourned after a four-hour meeting.

Nazi Rotarians Ordered to Quit Pro-Jew Clubs

Organization Denounced, Members Must Resign by December 31.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—The Nazi party high command started a campaign against Rotary Clubs in Germany today because the clubs are "not anti-semitic."

Walter Buch, chief justice of the party court, struck the first blow at the organizations in a statement circulated throughout the nation. Buch declared "essential principles" of German Rotary Clubs run counter to National Socialism.

"Rotary is not anti-semitic, and it is ruled by an international organization conceived in America," he explained. Jews, he said, have been "camouflaging" themselves behind the doors of the organization, which failed to climb on the Nazi bandwagon in 1933.

"Leadership in the Nazi state and membership in Rotary cannot go together," said Buch.

After ordering all Nazi party members belonging to Rotary to resign from the business men's organization by December 31 or become liable for "penalties," Buch called on German officials to force government employes and regular army officers to give up Rotary membership.

A number of diplomats and a few army officers are Rotary members.

The official Rotary yearbook shows 1,365 members in Germany. Berlin members said "a small percentage" are Jews. Dr. Hans Luther, former German ambassador to Washington, was an honorary member of the Berlin club.

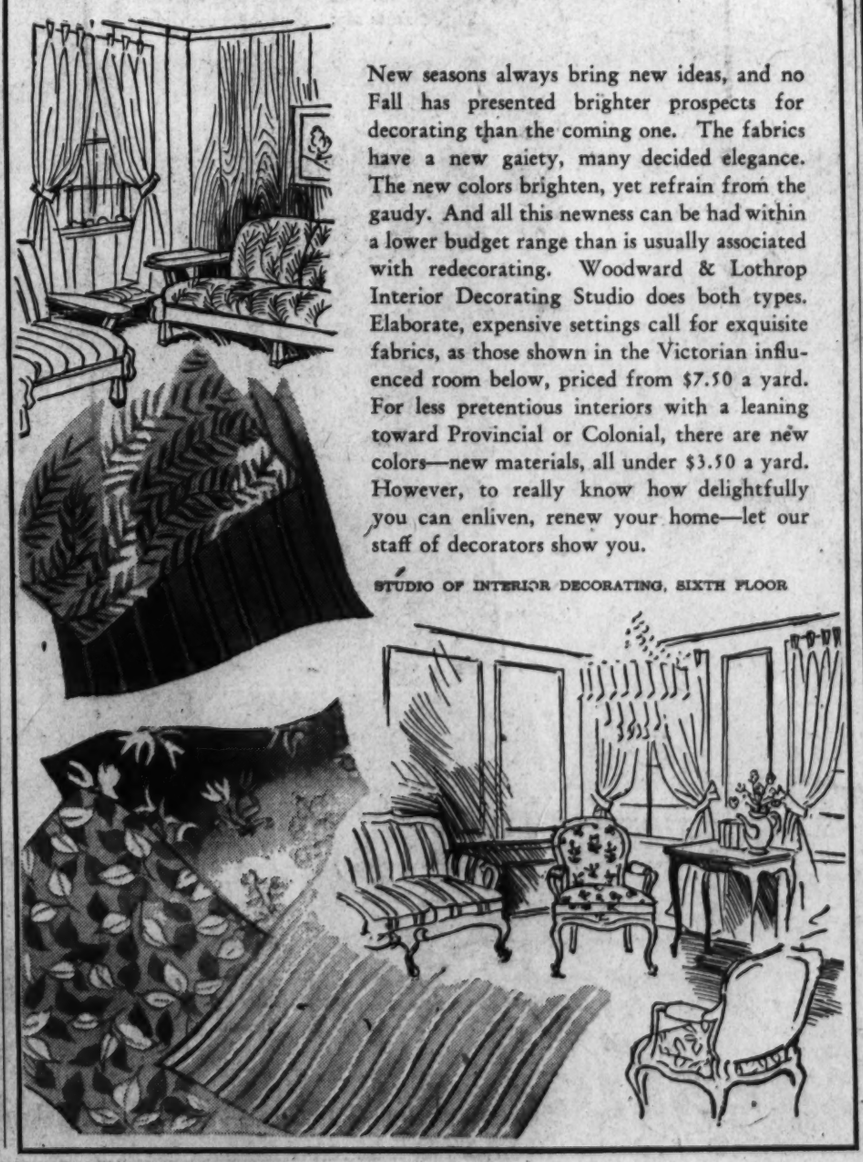
REDECORATING Can Be Suited to Your Budget



New seasons always bring new ideas, and no Fall has presented brighter prospects for decorating than the coming one. The fabrics have a new gaiety, many decided elegance. The new colors brighten, yet refrain from the gaudy. And all this newness can be had within a lower budget range than is usually associated with redecorating. Woodward & Lothrop Interior Decorating Studio does both types. Elaborate, expensive settings call for exquisite fabrics, as those shown in the Victorian influenced room below, priced from $7.50 a yard. For less pretentious interiors with a leaning toward Provincial or Colonial, there are new colors—new materials, all under $3.50 a yard. However, to really know how delightfully you can enliven, renew your home—let our staff of decorators show you.

Congress Again Thinks for Self, Woodrum Says

Dictator Fear Unfounded Now, Representative Assures Public.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 24.—Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, asserted tonight there was no figure upon the American political horizon to whom the people could look "with such confidence for leadership" as President Roosevelt, but that where "there is a difference of opinion, Congress is going to do the legislating."

Reviewing in a radio address the session of Congress just adjourned, Woodrom said it was natural that Congress was willing in the early phases of the depression to accept Roosevelt's judgment, but with the necessity for emergency action past, "the legislative branch of the Government has resumed its prerogatives and has reclaimed the right to do its own thinking."

Cites Court Bill Revolt.

In support of this statement, the Congressman cited the refusal by Congress to enact the President's court bill and the Administration's wages and hours bill.

Regardless of the merits or demerits of these two controversial issues, he said, "certainly there can be no just fear of a dictatorship when the legislative branch of the Government will stand by its guns."

Congress not only appropriated $9,000,000,000 in the past session, he went on, but entered into "staggering commitments, namely, the farm tenancy program and the so-called Federal Housing Program.

"We do not seem to have learned a lesson that the fiddler's pay day will surely come," he added.

Ultimate Judgment Safe.

Summarizing, he declared that the "ultimate judgment of the American people is going to be sound and safe; the foundation of our Government is secure and it's going to endure."

He asserted, "There is on the American political scene no potential leader whose figure can compare with that of the President," but added he had no idea that Roosevelt would consider a third term.

"Whatever the future may hold," he said, "the fine, progressive liberal thought that the President has brought to the American system of government will live on as a monument to his leadership."

Motorist Accused Of Hitting Officer Is Held for Jury

Thomas Boselli, 55, of the 200 block of First street southwest, charged with using his automobile as a "dangerous weapon" to "assault" Traffic Policeman Conner Gould, was held for grand jury action and placed under $1,500 bond yesterday by Police Court Judge John P. McMahon.

Gould is in Emergency Hospital with head injuries suffered Saturday after being struck by an automobile police said was driven by Boselli.

Boselli, according to Policeman Lawrence Hartnett, attempted to escape after a traffic violation on Bladensburg road. He proceeded down the road, Hartnett said, and near Mount Olivet Cemetery came upon Gould, who was standing by another traffic offender, his motorcycle nearby.

According to Hartnett, Boselli struck both the motorcycle and Gould.

Alabamans Call Parley on Senator

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Aug. 24 (AP).—Chairman John D. McQueen, of the Alabama Democratic executive committee, announced today he will call the State committee to meet Saturday.

He said he will recommend special primary elections for the nomination of a Democratic candidate to fill the unexpired term of Senator Hugo Black, with the qualifying date for filing September 21, and the primary Tuesday, November 9.

McQueen announced he would not be a candidate for the Senate post.

By the Associated Press.

Gov. Graves and Senator Dixie Bibb Graves, of Alabama, left by airplane yesterday for Montgomery after the former saw Federal officials about pending Alabama projects. The couple said they would return to Washington several times during the Congressional vacation period.

World Authority on Uniforms Dies Here After Long Illness

Warren M. Shoonmaker Knew Past, Present Dress of All Navies.

WARREN MYERS SCHOONMAKER.

Warren M. Schoonmaker, who probably knew more about naval and military uniforms than any man in the world, died yesterday at his home, 619 Princeton place. He was 58 and had been ill for several months.

Uniforms were Mr. Schoonmaker's hobby. His job, up until his retirement last March, was chief of the mail and file division of the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department. He knew the regalia and insignia of deckhands and admirals, not only of today but of yesterday. He was an authority on such matters not only in the American Navy, but in foreign navies. Consequently, his hobby was a valuable asset to the Navy Department.

Mr. Schoonmaker, a native of Marengo, Ill., came to Washington as a youth and began working for the Government on April 9, 1900.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Daisy Schoonmaker; three daughters, Mrs. Edith S. Gosnell, who lives near Alta Vista, Md.; Mrs. Dorothy S. Low and Mrs. Eleanor S. Everett, of this city, and a son, John Schoonmaker, of this city. There are seven grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at the residence. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Wizard Who Lost $1,000,000 At Baccarat Tries to Recoup

By the Associated Press.

Biarritz, France, Aug. 24.—Steel-nerved Amleto Battisti stepped into the Biarritz Casino today with a head full of lightning mathematics, a fortune in his pocket and a determination to risk all his money for revenge at the baccarat table.

The Uruguayan mathemetician and banker set the date of his big money come-back game as Wednesday, September 1. Then he expects to meet at the "big table" in the casino the men who took more than a million dollars from him in a single series of baccarat games eight years ago.

Before that time, Battisti had ranked among the top high stakes baccarat players from South America, France and England. He dropped out of the "sky's the limit" group with his tumble eight years ago.

Quietly and carefully he built up his stake until he could bank a sky's the limit game again.

Then he whispered to a gambling friend, Antonio Abecassin, that "I want a rendezvous with fortune." He delegated Abecassin to invite to a game September 1 the group of players who broke him in 1929.

To get his hand in, Battisti took the bank today at a smaller game.

Battisti has promised to pit himself, as banker, against a field composed of the "big names" in the baccarat world. The by-word in the game of fortunes will be "tout va," or any bet goes. Disinterested professional players, including some of the better known Casino bankers, will be on the side lines as referees.

Capper to Open Crusade to End Tariff Treaties

Kansan Says Roosevelt Policy Sells Out Farmer to Aid East.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, announced yesterday he will carry on a "grass-roots campaign" against the Administration's reciprocal trade agreement policy.

He denounced the trade program, under which the Government has made agreements with 16 nations, as a disguised method of "selling out the farmer for the benefit of Eastern manufacturers."

The slender, gray-thatched Kansan said he will speak in the next three months at more than 40 fairs, farm picnics, and agricultural association meetings in the Middle West.

Predicting that the agreements would "arouse a growing volume of protest" among farmers, Capper cited State Department figures for the last fiscal year, which showed a $400,000,000 increase in imports of agricultural products, while farm exports declined $30,000,000.

The last Congress renewed for three years the Administration's power to make reciprocal trade agreements with other nations.

It authorized the State Department to grant tariff concessions to foreign powers, in return for a reduction of duties on specific American products. The American concessions are automatically extended to other countries with which the United States has "most favored nation" treaties.

Secretary Hull, chief proponent of this policy, has vigorously defended the agreements as a means of cutting away gradually the fetters on international trade.

2,100 Jobless Abandon 'Siege' of Capital After Parade

Chief Objects Are Rejected By White House

500 Policemen on Guard; Leaders Hail 'Success' of Demonstration.

Assured by leaders that their "National Job March" had ended in victory, 2,100 bedraggled WPA job seekers abandoned banners and placards last night to turn homeward in a varied assortment of autos, trucks and chartered buses.

Footsore and hoarse after a two-hour parade with 500 policemen through downtown streets, the marchers slumped in seats at the Labor Department auditorium to hear first a White House statement refusing to grant their main objective and then a victory cry from officials of the Workers Alliance of America.

"We consider our march a great success," said David Lasser, alliance president. "On no former occasion have we been granted so many concessions. We have been victorious—although our demands have only partially been met."

He urged the mud-caked delegates to disband their Potomac Park encampment and "take up the cause" back home.

During yesterday's parade, a picked group of marchers, headed by Lasser, presented demands to the White House for "immediate reinstatement" of all discharged WPA workers. Later, a letter signed by Marvin McIntyre, Presidential secretary, was read to the Labor Department mass meeting. It said in part:

"I am directed by the President to say he regrets that it is not within our power to agree to this request."

Further Cuts Doubted.

The marchers were told, however, that the reduction in WPA employment has now reached a point where further dismissals will not be necessary and will be made only for cause. No barrier, the President promised, will be placed in the way of filling every job made possible "by our available resources."

This was hailed as a victory by leaders of the march. In further claim that their mission had been accomplished in part, Lasser cited a promise by WPA Administrator Hopkins to readjust problems of labor relations within the WPA and establish a revised system of reviewing complaints.

Accompanied by martial music from a sound truck and with shouts of "we want jobs" . . . "WPA must not go" . . . "Where are our jobs?" . . . the marchers paraded past WPA headquarters on New York avenue, chanted their demands in front of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and visited the Labor Department auditorium.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Metropolitan Police Superintendent, and Capt. Patrick J. Carroll, Park Police chief, were ready for anything. There was one policeman for every three marchers.

Six Buses Leave.

Last night six buses—chartered at $29 a day—left Washington with 300 members of the New York delegation. Several groups are expected to remain a few days in order to present their problems to Hopkins at a scheduled series of conferences.

Lasser said success of the "job march" was greatly aided by cooperation from U. S. Park authorities who provided camping grounds in West Potomac Park.

Along yesterday's line of march, downtown office building workers spent their lunch hours hanging from windows as the parade passed by. Careful precautions were taken to shunt the marchers from both the White House and Capitol. Although shouting demands at every step, the demonstrators willingly agreed to pass quietly in front of Emergency Hospital.

Almost one policeman for every three marchers featured the parade yesterday of 2,100 unemployed WPA workers here demanding jobs. After moving down Pennsylvania avenue to the Capitol they broke up. Later the group voted to leave town.

Hollywood Mystery Man Jailed For Holdup Pending Decision

John Montague, 'Uncrowned Champion' Golfer, Returned to New York; Crosby, Kibby Affidavits Offered in His Favor.

By the United Press.

Elizabethtown, N. Y., Aug. 24.—John Montague, Hollywood's mystery golfer, friend of Bing Crosby and other screen and radio stars, went to jail tonight while Supreme Court Justice O. Byron Brewster considered his appeal for bail pending trial on 7-year-old robbery charges. A decision is expected Thursday.

Montague smiled at the end of his hard, 3-000-mile journey from California, where he waived extradition to "wipe the slate clean."

James M. Noonan, Albany attorney who defended Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer the gangster in income-tax evasion trials, argued Montague's appeal for bail.

"Mr. Montague has no thought of running away," he said.

District Attorney Thomas McDonald said the golfer, who many experts have termed "the world's uncrowned champion," and three companions held up the Jay, N. Y., roadhouse with blackjacks and guns and escaped with about $700. The bandits, he charged, also "beat a 65-year-old patron with the butt of a gun."

Noonan retorted that Hollywood citizens had accepted Montague and "returned him to society." He showed affidavits signed by Crosby, Guy Kibbie, Oliver Hardy and Andy Devine.

The golfer wasn't named Montague in the warrant, but Laverne Moore. Montague said "the name Moore died" when he began his life anew on the West Coast.

$100,000,000 Work Of PWA Approved

By the Associated Press.

The Public Works Administration announced yesterday Presidential approval of nearly $100,000,000 worth of new Federal-aid construction.

The Federal Government's share of the new works totaled $48,115,977, including grants of $42,812,177 and loans of $5,303,800 for construction of schools, water works, sewerage systems and other "useful projects." Local communities will bear the difference between the PWA allotments and the total cost of construction.

Two Persons Hurt In D. C. Mishaps

Henry Windel, 31, of 1734 Evarts street northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital yesterday with head lacerations, brain concussion and a possible skull fracture after being struck at Twenty-fourth and M streets by an automobile reportedly operated by Cecil Surratt, 25, Arlington, Va. The driver was not held.

Claude V. Pitts, 9, of 1209 North Capitol street, was injured when he was run down while riding a scooter near First street and New York avenue northwest. He was removed to Sibley Hospital by Martin I. Cook, 35, of 654 Ninth street northeast, the driver. The boy was treated for bruises.

Mental Ailments Of Veterans Seen Growing Problem

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 24.—Virginia Legionnaires attending the nineteenth annual convention were told by E W. Jordan, manager of the Veterans' Facility at Roanoke that a new problem is confronting the organization in the form of latent mental ills. He explained that quite a few veterans "crack up" in middle age without any previous warning of disability. These psychiatric cases threaten, he said, to eclipse the tuberculosis cases which developed among some former service men a few years ago.

He added that emotional instability may be traced to taking young men from peaceful pursuits, putting a gun in their hands and telling them to kill.

Jordan said that the cost of administering the 81 facilities in all parts of the country during the last fiscal year was $22,460,000.

25 Cents Forecast As Cost of Airmail Letters to Europe

By the Associated Press.

Airmail to Europe, perhaps to be inaugurated this fall, probably will cost 25 cents a letter, postal officials said yesterday.

"We had hoped to make it 20 cents," said Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General. "Now it looks more like 25."

He explained that Congress' failure to authorize a poundage rate would make the cost greater.

Two airmail bills were awaiting action when Congress adjourned. One was to extend the domestic airmail system by 3,000 miles; the other to authorize payment of a flat poundage rate for transatlantic airmail in lieu of a more costly contract rate.

British Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airlines already are completing test flights over routes they hope to inaugurate by November.

1 OIL-PLATE YOUR ENGINE

instead of just changing your oil

OIL-PLATING is a plain extra benefit that other oils do not even claim to give you! OIL-PLATING comes only from Conoco Germ Processed oil, which absolutely PLATES itself all over the insides of your engine, and stays there. I mean Oil-Plating can't get scraped off or pushed away while you're speeding along on sizzling hot days. And it won't go up in smoke, but lasts and lasts. Neither can Oil-Plating run down off the job while the engine's stopped... No ghost of a chance for Oil-Plating to be among the missing every time you start the car. So your Oil-Plated engine is the big exception, when engineers say that bum oiling at the start—summer, same as winter—makes more than half of all engine wear. They positively don't mean you, with your engine Oil-Plated by Conoco Germ Processed oil. The longer life of your Oil-Plated engine naturally takes a little while to prove... but right now, from the minute I put in Germ Processed, you can't mistake the coolness and quiet due to Oil-Plating, or the way your oil level stays up.

War News.

Two American newspapermen, correspondents for the New York Times, were injured in Monday's carnage at Shanghai when either an airplane bomb or a high explosive shell burst at one of the city's busiest intersections at noontime. One of the two will be fortunate if he makes a full recovery.

The risks run by the entire Shanghai and North China corps of correspondents in nightly loading the cables with news of the Sino-Japanese hostilities are neither surprising nor unprecedented. During the past two years, indeed, newspapermen in Ethiopia and Spain have faced equal dangers. More than one has paid for this courage with his life. Willfred Barber of the Chicago Tribune died at Addis Ababa of malaria contracted while covering a military expedition in the lowlands. Several French correspondents have been killed in the midst of the Spanish civil war.

All the world protests a hatred for war and its horrors. Yet a morbid fixation overpowers mankind whenever fighting breaks out. It must know the details and a premium is placed on reports gathered from the thick of the fray. So into the thick go newsmen and photographers, bound by the tradition of their craft which makes a rendezvous with death a part of "the game."

Not A Better 'Ole.

A back to the backyard movement is said to be the motif of the toy manufacturers who are exhibiting their advance ideas at the Chicago Toy Mart. Parents, teachers and traffic heads have long warned children against playing in the streets. At last practical steps are being taken and in the quickest way possible to a child's heart— through his toys. Slides, swings, and basketball hoops, usually too unwieldy except for school and park grounds, are being scaled down to fit even the smallest city yard.

Not only are playthings being reduced but they are assuming more and more the appearance of their counterparts in the adult world. The grownups in "Thunder On The Left" would have little trouble now bridging the gap between themselves and the children. For instead of the infantile doll house of old there are utilitarian garages for housing scooters; show-boats with upper and lower decks; and trailers in which sister can ride behind brother's velocipede. The Little Tin Soldier would certainly eye this askance.

But one so-called improvement is certain to meet with skepticism both on the part of junior and his dad. That is the manufacture of an "ole swimming hole" which may be set any place in the yard and rolled out of sight at night. Even its acclaimed virtues —easy accessibility and a smooth, unleakable bottom—are enough to offend the worst sissy on the block.

Anybody knows that an ole swimming hole—what is an ole swimming hole—should be off the beaten track in a secret place half-hidden by tall weeds, sloping trees with trailing branches, and rough underfoot where the rocks'll cut your feet if you don't watch out. Next thing we know they'll be putting out barked shins in cellophane and stubbed toes in all sizes. How about it, fellahs?

Deficits And Reserve Policy.

As long as the budget remains unbalanced, and the Treasury is forced to borrow to cover current deficits, the credit policies of the Federal Reserve system will inevitably be affected by the exigencies of deficit financing. This applies to the cuts in discount rates announced by the Federal Reserve banks, at Chicago, Atlanta and Minneapolis. The Board of Governors evidently hopes to check the liquidation of Government obligations by member banks and to encourage them instead to borrow from the reserve banks when in need of funds.

During the last year reporting member banks have reduced their holdings of Government securities by more than $1,000,000,000, while simultaneously increasing their commercial loans in response to business demands for credit. Recently the pressure of this selling has been reflected in a pronounced weakness in the Government bond market. Prior to the large September refinancing operation the Federal Reserve authorities are, therefore, taking steps designed to arrest the course of liquidation.

Excess reserves still stand at the fairly high total of $750,000,000. But it is expected that seasonal crop movements and fall business expansion will bring increased credit demands and cause a sharp reduction in the reserve figure. That indicates that the excess reserves of some banks may be wiped out, and that they will be forced either to sell securities or to borrow from the Federal Reserve banks. In anticipation of such a situation, reductions are being made in discount rates in the hope of encouraging a return to borrowing.

Objectively viewed, it is highly desirable for the member banks to liquidate excessively large holdings of Government securities. Yet any wholesale selling bringing declines in values would mean losses to the banks and would also have the effect of unstabilizing the market for new Government issues.

The Federal Reserve authorities are faced by a real dilemma in trying to maintain cheap credit to smooth the way for Government financing, after seeking to avert an inflationary expansion of credit by increasing reserve requirements and cutting down excess reserves. Having stimulated member-bank sales of Government securities by their anti-inflationary policy they are now trying to discourage such sales by urging resort to direct borrowing as an alternative.

Such contradictory methods are unfortunately to be expected so long as the Government continues to pile up deficits which have to be financed by sales of Government obligations.

Toward A Far Eastern Policy.

Almost simultaneously, on Monday night, Secretary Hull issued a public statement and Senator Pittman spoke over the radio on American policy in the Far Eastern crisis. Taken together, as they should be, these two announcements do much to clarify the direction which the Administration seeks to follow in this tangled problem.

To Senator Pittman, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, fell the disagreeable task of explaining why the neutrality act passed by the last Congress should not be invoked in the present conflict. To do so he was forced to employ some rather fine-spun reasoning, and even to intimate that the passage of this "misnamed" neutrality act was very unfortunate. In this, as in the Senator's desire to avert its invocation, all Americans able to see the Sino-Japanese conflict in perspective will agree.

The task confronting Secretary Hull was no easier. He too is hampered by the possibility that we may have to apply the neutrality act and thereby tacitly take sides against China. This prevents him from having the freedom of action which was possessed by his predecessor in office.

Nearly six years ago, when Japan put on a dress rehearsal for her present aggression, Secretary Stimson defined it as "a destructive assault upon the good relations which must exist between neighbor nations if order and stability are to be preserved in the North Pacific." And in a later summation he concluded, praising the Chinese resistance at Shanghai in February, 1932, that "one of those rare moments of history had arrived when the soldier can render better service to the future of law and order than can the negotiator."

By contrast our present Secretary of State seems willing to give the impression that China ought to continue to negotiate herself into complete vassalage to Japan. "From the beginning of the present controversy (sic)," he says, "we have been urging upon both the Chinese and the Japanese governments the importance of refraining from hostilities and of maintaining peace."

Fortunately for the long-range prospects of peace in the Pacific there is little likelihood that Nanking will now pay the faintest attention to such advice. Chiang Kai-shek sedulously refrained from large-scale resistance while Japan progressively tore Manchuria, Jehol, Chahar and northern Hopei from his control. Lately he has seen China's greatest port invaded and her very capital bombed. Gen. Chiang would be a fool, a poltroon and a traitor to his people if he did not now hit back with all his strength, while there is still a chance for an independent China to survive. And most Americans wish him all success in his heroic stand.

If an enemy power had annexed New England, displaced Federal Government in northern New York and Ohio, was bombing Washington, and had a fleet of warships in the Hudson shelling New York, we would strongly resent any Chinese advice that we should "refrain from hostilities." Why we should gratuitously insult the Chinese by assuming that they are so much less patriotic is rather difficult to fathom.

But, if Secretary Hull's statement of Monday is read closely, and certain between-the-lines aspects stressed, it will be seen that it has far more latent force than appears at first glance.

The Secretary notes, in the first place, that the United States has interests at Shanghai which we cannot be expected to abandon to suit the pleasure of belligerents. He supports this by pointing out that a "small reinforcement" is being sent to assist our troops now in China "to be of assistance toward maintenance of order and security." But the issues of concern to our Government, he emphasizes, "go far beyond" the immediate question of protecting American lives and interests at Shanghai.

The Secretary then declares applicable to the present dispute his statement of policy of July 16, which advocates "faithful observance of international agreements"—obviously meaning here the Nine-Power Treaty. Finally, Mr. Hull emphasizes the Administration's belief in co-operative action with other powers to achieve these objectives "through pacific methods." This must be taken to indicate that a joint invocation of the Nine-Power Treaty is being considered.

Grouped together these points suggest a cautious but stiffening attitude on the part of the Administration. It may be hoped that this interpretation will prove correct. For if one thing is certain it is that polite gestures alone will not have the slightest effect in dissuading Japan from the plan of conquest mapped out by her militarists. And, to quote the words used by Secretary Stimson in 1932, there would only be "greater eventual difficulties if Japan by our assistance got off without the moral condemnation of the world which she deserved."

The British Relief System.

Senator Byrnes, who is chairman of a special Senate investigating committee dealing with relief problems, is planning a trip to England to see how the British handle such matters. Mr. Byrnes is a loyal supporter of the Administration, but he has taken a strong stand against continuance of lavish relief spending by the Federal Government. Emphasizing the importance of balancing the budget, he recently attempted to cut work-relief appropriations to $1,000,000,000. As on previous occasions, Mr. Hopkins successfully resisted drastic curtailment of WPA outlays, largely because of the lack of satisfactory alternative proposals.

After observing the British system at close range, Mr. Byrnes will doubtless return home fortified in his opposition to our extravagant work-relief organization. With a better understanding of the basic differences between American and British methods of dealing with unemployment, he will be in a position to offer constructive suggestions for future guidance instead of confining himself to denunciations of extravagance.

Under the WPA we have a hybrid system of relief which does not differentiate between the workless, the work shy and the unemployable. It is in many cases a scarcely camouflaged dole, yet with outlays per person disproportionately high compared with direct-relief standards.

In Great Britain a highly-developed, comprehensive system of unemployment insurance is relied upon to tide all bona fide workers over periods of unemployment. Doles and work relief are normally confined to those who can be certified as unemployable. Furthermore, the healthy unemployed person's ability and willingness to work is tested constantly. He must maintain registration at a public employment exchange and be prepared to accept suitable private employment at all times in order to qualify for benefits. Incidentally this simple device makes British unemployment statistics continuously accurate.

In a short time we too shall have in all our States systems of unemployment insurance that should be capable of carrying the load of normal and seasonal unemployment for a large proportion of workers. But in the meantime we have to make adequate provision for a large number of uninsured unemployed and unemployables who are public charges. British experience emphasizes the advantages of a permanent system of unemployment relief based upon insurance principles and rigid segregation from unemployables of the unemployed who are willing to work.

Such a permanent organization for dealing methodically with the problem of unemployment has no place in it for the wasteful and ineffective system that is known as work relief—a synonym for the WPA.

Doctored Marriages.

The facility with which nature copies art is again demonstrated in a novel experiment recently conducted by a British doctor. In order to measure the biological effect of excitement this brave medico decided to X-ray his wife's heart while she was emotionally upset. To do this, he cold-bloodedly provoked a marital quarrel. It is interesting to learn that the unpleasantness caused her pulmonary organ to contract. But there would be more interest in knowing what happened to the doctor when his wife realized that her emotions had been exacerbated for laboratory material.

If this unidentified Britisher happened to see a play in London called "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," it would be well for him to ponder its point. The parallel starts with the fact that Dr. Clitterhouse was also an English physician. His ambition was to gather the heart reaction of crooks while they were under the emotional stress and fear of being caught. To accomplish this, he had to join a gang and nag its members into bigger and better crimes. Before realizing the depths into which he had floundered, Dr. Clitterhouse had led the gang from petty thievery to robbery on a huge scale.

When we also recall the way in which Dr. Watson would desert his amiable wife at the crook of a finger by Sherlock Holmes, considerable doubts on the connubial desirability of British physicians are raised. American girls, contemplating transatlantic wedlock, had better stick to dukes.

Preventive Dental Care.

From the Hartford Courant.

Hartford has good prospects of obtaining the first city program of preventive dentistry for preschool children in the State. Last February the Hartford Dental Society took the lead by adopting a resolution entitled "Dentistry for Children." In it the practicing dentists of the city gave their approval to a program for educating parents to secure from their family dentist preventive dental services for their children and the provision of preventive dental services for approximately 2,500 under-privileged preschool children. The next step was the presentation of a project to the State Public Health Council, asking funds from the Social Security Board for payment of the salaries of two part-time dentists and the equipment of a clinic. The project was approved and sent on to Washington. The only expense to the city for the initiation of this service will be covered by provision of space for the clinic.

Symposium On Far-Eastern Crisis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been considering the editorial in The Post of August 22 on "The Nine-Power Treaty" with its "indication that the Administration seeks to co-ordinate its policy in the Far Eastern crisis with that of Great Britain" despite "the extent to which Anglo-American divergencies assisted Japan in her last aggression" and, "since the policies and interests of the two nations in the Far East are in any case similar, it would seem only common sense that they should be strengthened by a mutual declaration of purpose" in a conference summoned "to ask Japan exactly what she seeks to obtain by her attack on China."

This leads one to propound: What will Britain do?

All indications, including your editorial, would point to a re-establishment of a collective system for the Far East, a system which the British discarded in 1932 when the British cabinet failed to support the Stimson policy and thereby missed a golden opportunity for bringing the United States into active and positive co-operation with the collective system in the Pacific.

There may have been two reasons for the British refusal to support the Stimson policy, either one of which might have been satisfactory to Sir John Simon, the British Foreign Minister.

First, the unwillingness of the United States to obligate itself to positive action in support of any policy dealing with international co-operation. That the United States will not make commitments for positive action with other powers may be due to the fact that though our foreign policies are initiated and conducted by the executive branch of our Government, positive action involving the use of the armed forces of the United States must receive the approval of the people through the authority of the legislative branch.

We will agree on principles of policy, we will exchange information on international questions, we will suggest and recommend a course of action to be pursued by others, we will send semiofficial observers to conferences at which we refuse to accept official membership and decline to define the official attitude of our Government, but we will not agree and commit ourselves to any positive action as to the means whereby the policies are to be rendered effective.

What assurance did the British Foreign Minister have that the Hoover-Stimson doctrine would be supported by the American people? Was he justified in ordering the mobilization of the British fleet for duty in the western Pacific with the absolute reliance that the United States fleet would join them in a display of force against Japan? Rapid and decisive action was essential. To accept Japan's challenge only to find that the United States was unwilling to assume a positive role would have resulted in a "loss of face" to Britain, the consequences of which cannot be estimated.

Perhaps Sir John Simon was correct in his final analysis of the American attitude: The issue was one in which the American people were not vitally interested; the American policy of isolation, good neighbor, neutrality and no war would prevail; and that they would not agree to the use of the United States forces to pull British chestnuts out of a Far Eastern fire.

The second reason for failure to support the Stimson doctrine naturally would follow the conclusion arrived at under the first reason. Britain could not embark successfully, alone and unassisted, upon any active policy involving the use of her major naval forces against Japan in the western Pacific. Britain has publicly announced that she would not use military force to protect the territorial integrity of China, has admitted the military weakness of the British empire in attempting to enforce her demands on Japan and frankly acknowledged that it just cannot be done. Japan is too strong in the western Pacific for Britain to think of making any demands on Japan that will require the use of naval force for their ultimate execution, at least while the European situation remains in its present chaotic condition.

During the last decade, Britain lost considerable "face" due to the decline in the strength of her military establishment. Today, she is spending $7,500,000,000 in a face-lifting program. However, even this enormous program will not permit of Britain again adopting a two-fleet standard: One superior to any European fleet in the Atlantic and one equal to the Japanese fleet in the western Pacific.

Britain must make an agreement with some power in order to maintain some semblance of the status quo in the Far East. The present alignment of the naval powers in Europe makes it impossible to gain an effective ally in that area. That leaves the United States and Japan to whom Britain may appeal to preserve the balance of power in the western Pacific.

The American people in official statements, press and radio have consistently expressed their refusal to consent to the use of military forces in the Far East for any purpose. We seem to be willing to move out of the Far East bag and baggage and let Asia and Europe stew in their own Far-Eastern juice.

That leaves Japan.

What will Britain do?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your recent editorial under the caption "Gone With the Wind," in which you decry the brutal tyranny of Japan in its devilish attack upon military-unprepared China deserves to be enlarged into a separate pamphlet and given the widest possible publicity. I am confident that the great majority of people not only in America, but in nearly all other nations indorse the sentiments expressed in the editorial, and if published, as I suggest, millions of copies could be sold at a low price, with unspeakable humane results.

Before your editorial was published I had begun a letter for The Post under the title, "The Slaughter of the Innocents," in which I had the same condemnatory views of the sham and hypocrisy of Japanese assertions that they had no intention of "aggression or expansion."

I am of the opinion that a military federation of Great Britain, Russia, France, the United States and China would serve as a sufficient threat that such diabolical treatment as was handed out to Ethiopia by Mussolini and is now being handed out to the innocent China by Japan would never take place. In such a federation lies the only hope of peace and justice.

That the political administrators of these nations, suggested as a federation, have been guilty of imperialism, does not condemn the present administrators of these governments, nor preclude them from entering into a confederation to check the would-be aggressive governments. The "sins of the fathers cannot be visited upon the children."

I am over 60 years of age, have never been in any war and am instinctively, or culturally, of a pacifist nature, but if possible, as a matter of honor and in defense of justice and defiance of tyranny I would volunteer to forfeit my life in defense of Chinese innocents.

EDWIN EVANS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

After having read your recent editorial, "Gone With the Wind," I felt it was so splendidly written, so frankly justified, so candidly stated and yet withal so deplorably illogical, so discouragingly impractical.

Here we are a nation of so-called isolationists, a nation that proudly boasts that it fought to prevent war, for an ideal, rather than for any earthly gain; we who when peace reigns say so determinedly and so smugly let the other fellow fight but we'll sit back and watch this time. These have been the policies which Uncle Sam has declared; these were his principles.

And so came the war between the two major nations geographically situated farthest from America, and what happens to our high-minded ideals? They are hastily forgotten and swept back by the flood of cheap emotion emanating from a group of hot-headed flag-wavers, ironically enough safely removed from the age limits of the war draft. Perhaps when The Post prints such fine copy as "Gone With the Wind" it didn't realize that this splendid boost to the anti-Japanese was a wicked and insidious thing as far as we eligibles of the draft are concerned, that this was a long and powerful step toward war which we supposedly abhor yet flirt with promiscuously, that this hypocritical policy of building up this intense emotion within our citizens proved such a gigantic blunder as few years ago as 1917.

I am eligible for draft and so have a great interest in any near-war movements of our country. Consequently when I read that one of The Post's letter writers feels that America with an allied aggregation should proceed immediately to help the Chinese remove the Japs from their (the Chinese) country, I feel in a sense that I am being somewhat victimized by one who admittedly is too old to fight, one who has no right whatever to ask anyone else to fight for the simple reason that neither his health nor life is being in any way imperiled by the present war.

I feel that your influential editorial and the letter of the gentleman referred to above do more to aggravate war than to intensify peace and I am so sure you advocate the latter. D. J. C.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is with sincerity and pleasure that I commend your very able editorial, "Gone With The Wind," as well as many others.

I lived many years in the Hawaiian Islands and had Japanese friends. But the Japanese government and its diplomacy is crafty and not to be trusted. It is time someone wrote pointedly on the subject and this you have done.

NETTA STRAIN SCOTT.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is passing strange that this Government does not declare neutrality in the present Sino-Japanese conflict. Certainly no one can deny that this conflict has long since reached the stage of war, and Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull must know it.

Whether the combatants have declared war makes no difference. The neutrality act does not regard such declaration as an essential criterion upon which the President's neutrality declaration must be based. The Government declared neutrality in the case of the Spanish civil war and of the Italo-Ethiopian war, and did so with alacrity and fanfare and propaganda. Does the Government have two standards for Europe and for Asia?

The Editor of The Post and a good many people seem to think the neutrality law a punitive measure designed to inflict hardship upon the nation which is the victim of aggression in a given conflict. That is an obviously mistaken notion. The law was enacted solely for the purpose of keeping this country out of war. It is a measure of self-protection for America.

You lament the League of Nations which is dead as a dead cat, and the Stimson doctrine which if carried to its conclusion will surely drag us into war with Japan. Can you not see this? Take off your colored glasses and look at the situation more clearly.

The Small Businessman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is a self-evident fact that large concerns, on account of their greater efficiency, cannot absorb all the unemployed. Consequently we are dependent upon the small businessman to absorb the surplus.

Now, if additional burdens are placed upon him by unwise legislation, how is he going to meet competition, keep his business going and do his part to relieve the serious situation that now exists?

There always has been considerable animosity between capital and labor, but the time has come to bury the hatchet and work for a more equitable adjustment.

Problems Of Child Adoption

From a radio address by Herschel Alt, general secretary of the St. Louis Children's Aid Society, broadcast over Station KSD.

INTEREST in adoption and all its phases has in recent years been manifested by an increasing number of books and articles dealing with the subject. One important question is whether there are more homes seeking children to adopt than there are children available.

One writer contends there are a large number of children who might be placed for adoption, and that a large number of families would be willing to adopt these children, but are denied the opportunity because of the ill-advised policies of institutions and agencies. At best, we believe there is a limited element of truth in this claim.

In our own community, many persons seeking children for adoption are unsuccessful in their search, but in many instances this may not be due to the lack of children, but rather to some shortcoming in the family which disqualifies it, or because of the unavailability of the particular kind of child being sought. Most families want young children, usually under the age of 3, and the number of such children available for adoption is limited.

Let us consider, then, why there seem so few children available.

Most thoughtful persons will agree that children should not be removed from their own parents merely because a foster home offering better advantages can be found. The incapacity of the parents would have to be very fundamental to justify the surrender of a child by them and its placement with strangers.

* * *

The children placed for adoption are largely from two groups: full orphans, that is, children bereft of both father and mother, and the illegitimate children of unmarried parents. Orphanhood is responsible for only a small percentage of homeless children. A census taken in 1933 in St. Louis showed that of the 5,798 children in orphanages and foster homes, only 418, or 7 per cent, were full orphans; the remainder were in need of foster care because of the more or less permanent incapacity of parents, based upon physical and mental health, defect of character, etc. Eighty per cent of these children return to their own homes or the homes of relatives when they leave the orphanage or foster home.

"Why," you say, "with a large number of people wanting to take children into their homes, should not at least these 418 full orphans be immediately absorbed into families?" Many have brothers and sisters from whom they do not wish to be separated. Some have grandparents, aunts and uncles who are interested in them and with whom they might ultimately find a home. The largest proportion are older children, for whom it is difficult to find adoptive homes. A great many others have limited physical or mental endowment and are unsuitable for adoption.

As to illegitimate children, an important factor is the right of the mother to decide for herself as to whether she will keep her child or surrender it. Too often, the decision to separate an illegitimate child from its mother is made in great haste and later repented by those sharing in the decision. An unmarried mother may deeply regret her action a year or two later, when she may be in position to care for the child.

Let us consider two of the important issues which have to be met by the prospective foster-parents, if the best interests of the child and the foster-parents themselves are to be served. How can we be sure that the child available is possessed of the necessary qualities which give promise of physical and mental growth? How can we be sure that the foster-parents are persons who should be intrusted with this responsibility, and how can we be sure that this particular child is best suited to a particular home?

Agencies exercise every resource to determine the kind of endowment the child possesses. In all instances, they know something about the heredity of the mother, and, in most instances, of the father as well. It is the practice of many agencies not to place a child under 6 months of age, so as to have at least that amount of opportunity to observe its development. Such agencies will share their knowledge of the child's heredity and endowment with the prospective foster-parents.

* * *

On what basis might the agency refuse to give a child to those who ask for it? I can only indicate very generally some of the possible reasons of rejection.

There are people who think of a child as a toy, not very different from a cat or a dog; something to dress up and play with while it is cute and little. They have no conception of the responsibilities of parents. There are cranks who are looking for a child on which to try out their various theories—of health, education, religion or what-not. There are neurotic women who ask for a child as a cure; the doctor says they need to occupy their minds; a child in the house would do them good. There are failing marriages which hope to mend the situation by introducing children. These, in addition to the parents who are financially, physically or morally unfit, are the types of people to whom the agency would not be justified in giving a child.

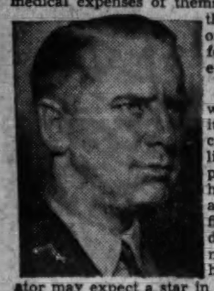
Sen. Bone's Proposal.

BETTER LATE than never, Senator Bone, of Washington, on the last day of Congress, introduced a bill to permit income taxpayers to deduct the medical expenses of themselves and the members of their families and to charge off not more than $250 a year for the actual expense of educating each child.



This proposal probably will come to nothing because it deals particularly with a class of citizens of no political unity, the salaried employes, who are deemed to have no rights because they are neither dirt-poor nor filthy-rich. Nevertheless, it does express an unexpected note of sympathy, and for his few kind words the Senator may expect a star in his crown.

The class of which I write is the tax collector's meat. These people draw salaries which are matters of plain, accessible record and their deductions and exemptions are few and small. They have neither holding companies nor incorporated yachts, they can't make loans to themselves and charge off the amortization because they haven't the money to lend and they have neither seventeenth century barns nor Christmas tree ranches with which to confuse the short and simple record of their earnings and disbursements from year to year.

• • • •

THEY ARE ALLOWED a deduction of $2,500 for mama and papa and a matter of about $1.10 a day for the support of each kid up to the age of 18, at which time the parents are expected to kick them out to become little bums if they must, while the big heart of the Government enfolds the children of the great, non-taxable, ill-kept third and tries to gentle them through the difficult twilight between youth and maturity.

I can't figure out why the son of a suburban salesman or chief clerk is supposed to be ready to get out and root, hog or die at the age of 18, while the son of an underprivileged character over beyond the tracks is deemed to be a tender shoot and the object of the Nation's solicitude and special care at the same birthday and for some time after.

The Internal Revenue people will admit that the farmer, for all his squawking, is one of our most reluctant taxpayers and that medical men and small merchants are almost equally difficult. The farmer extends his acres or his buildings or adds to his stock and calls it an outrage when the man with the briefcase sharpens up his pencils and tries to show him where he owes the U. S. A. $384.36, with accured interest, on a profit that he picked up, but forgot to declare, two years ago.

The Doc takes in an indefinite sum of twos, fives and tens and, anyway, unless he is a society doctor with a totsy number in a nurse's suit, to look up his patients' credit rating to see how sick they are, he isn't much of a hand to keep records. Just about the time he settles down of an evening to enter up 50 cents from the guy who dropped a crate on his toe, the phone rings and off he goes to deliver a bundle from Heaven at the home of some prolific town character who will promise to pay him $5 as soon as he sobers up.

• • • •

SMALL MERCHANTS also have a tendency to keep books on the back of a paper bag, but the man who gets a certain amount every week and has no problems of buying and selling, spoiled stock, depreciation, bad debts and interest with which to play parlor tricks on the agents is the one who has no alternative but to toss his money over the transom and walk on by.

Yet his health and the health of his family often are items of very heavy expense, particularly if he is good pay, as he usually is, being subject to garnishee.

As Senator Bone pointed out, the honest hay-shaker may deduct from his taxable income the money paid a veterinary to attend his cow in her most solemn hour and further deduct her price, on the hoof, if she vanishes into the shadow.

But the subject of our little essay may not subtract the cost of contributing another little American to the land he loves nor the price of the funeral in case of disaster. His own health is absolutely necessary in his circumstances, for without it he loses his earning power and his family goes on the town for quarters, heat and rations at a dead loss to the Government. But he isn't allowed to deduct as operating expense the cost of keeping himself in shape to scuffle for the pay check, without which he could pay no tax at all.

The education of his kids is supposed to be the business of the community to which he pays school taxes, but what with graft, neglect, bad planning and all he will take it on himself to give them a few little extra licks in a pay school if he can possibly manage. He gets no allowance for their education at any time, however, unless some genius in the Treasury has figured out a way to educate, house, feed, clothe and doctor a kid and buy him an occasional ball-bat or pair of skates on a fraction of a cent over $1.09 a day.

Our subject is the Patsy of the whole income tax system.

Court Plea for Golfer Montague.

(Respectfully submitted without charge to counsel for John Montague, Hollywood's "Mystery Golfer," who has waived examination and returned to New York to stand trial for an alleged robbery seven years ago.)

Your honor, I move for the discharge of the defendant on the ground that every act in his life subsequent to the alleged crime testifies to his complete reform. We have the evidence, if your honor please, that Mr. Montague has gone straight for the last seven years, and if you are a golfer you know what it means to go straight for seven holes.

• • • •

The defendant admits participation in a roadhouse robbery, and I will dismiss the question of whether all the trouble might have been avoided if he had asked the proprietor for permission to go through. My point is that he has been an exemplary character ever since. I have sworn affidavits of scores of golfers that throughout his California career he putted out all his putts, a test of character which should be convincing to anybody who ever played the game.

• • • •

We have affidavits declaring that in his seven years in California this man never put down a five when he had a seven, always added up his score correctly, and, above all, your honor, was never observed to resort to the contemptible practice of smoothing down the tall grass all around a ball under the pretense of "seeing if it is mine."

• • • •

He is charged with robbing a roadhouse. A roadhouse, indeed! Let us assume he robbed a de luxe hotel. Did he ever sole his club in a sand trap? No! Suppose he robbed the Grand Central Station. Did he ever abuse a caddy because he missed an easy putt? No! What if he pillaged the orphan asylum. Does any one say he ever patted down the green to smooth the course of his ball in a tight match? No! What if he looted the entire city, burned down the old ladies' home and stuck up the Twentieth Century Express. Did anybody ever see him pound down the ground to get a better brassie lie? No, a thousand times no!

• • • •

What have we here then? One single lapse in behavior against a record of breaking 70 with a rake, a broom and a shovel! One lapse of conduct, as against seven years of superb golf without a single instance of breaking a club, hiding his correct form or keeping an unfair handicap in all tournament play!

• • • •

I submit, your honor, that nothing more need be said to warrant my client's discharge with apologies and an invitation to play in Saturday's annual invitation tournament of the American Bar Association.

A Promise Of Cicero Fulpan

Delay On Farm Bill Explained To Mrs. Sizzel.

Petunia, R. F. D.
July 18, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I see in the papers they are talking of quitting Congress and you haven't done anything about helping the farmers. We have been waiting nearly seven months for you to do something and now you are about to let Congress stop without giving us anything.

Last year during your campaign you promised to help the farmers, raise wages and cut expenses by making some changes in the Government, but the papers are saying you are going to come home without doing any of these.

Please let me know if you have forgotten us.

Your constituent,
MRS. LOTTA SIZZEL.

P. S. I saw something in the paper the other day about Tories and Bourbons. What are they?

Washington, D. C.
July 20, 1937.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia, R. F. D.
My dear Mrs. Sizzel:

I regret that the Congressman is not at work again this morning, but in his absence I can assure you that he has not forgotten the farmers. The Congressman has often remarked that the farmers are closest to his heart and still would be even if most of his constituents were not farmers. And I am glad to inform you that the Congressman is giving his most serious consideration to the farm problem, which I am sure will mean a great deal to you. In fact he has great hopes of obtaining farm relief before Congress adjourns and stated only yesterday that he has an ace in the hole.

Assuring you that it is a pleasure to give you this encouragement, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

P. S. A Tory is somebody you don't like. And if you dislike him very much he is also a Bourbon.

Petunia, R. F. D.
July 22, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We are glad to know that you are going to help the farmer before you adjourn, and I have already made arrangements to buy a new set of fall clothes. Please let me know what an ace in the hole is.

Your constituent,
MRS. LOTTA SIZZEL.

P. S. What is an economic royalist they are always talking about?

Washington, D. C.,
July 24, 1937.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia R. F. D.
My dear Mrs. Sizzel:

I regret that excessive work has made it necesary for the Congressman to remain at home with a headache today. But in his continued absence from the office I take pleasure in answering your inquiry. You want to know what an ace in the hole is. An ace in the hole is a poker term, and poker players who have an ace in the hole usually win unless deuces are wild.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—An economic royalist is a man who makes a living without Government assistance.

Petunia R. F. D.
July 27, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am sorry to learn that you are having trouble with your head. We were rather surprised to learn that you play poker and we don't understand how you can play poker until you get a headache while the farmers are being neglected. We are going to have a big headache here if you don't do something soon.

Hezekiah Hawks, who was over from Detour to dinner with my husband, Mr. Sizzel, yesterday, said the deuces must have been pretty wild the other night to give you such a headache.

My husband, Mr. Sizzel, says Congress is about to play the deuce with the farmers.

Your constituent,
MRS. LOTTA SIZZEL.

Washington, D. C.
July 29, 1937.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia R. F. D.
Dear Mrs. Sizzel:

Your letter has disturbed me greatly and I hasten to reply. I regret exceedingly that you have received a most erroneous impression from my very able secretary's recent communication. I assure you that my little indisposition was caused solely by overwork.

You can believe me that the life of a Congressman is no sinecure, and if the Congressman happens to be a leader the work is all but unbearable.

Trusting that you will communi-

Yours very sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia R. F. D.
July 31, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I appreciate your letter about poker and I am glad to know that you have quit playing, but what we are interested in is helping the farmers before Congress quits too.

Unless you act soon we are not going to have a very pleasant winter. Please let me know what the ever normal granary is. Also what Congress is costing us, and why?

Yours sincerely,
MRS. LOTTA SIZZEL.

P. S.—If you are ruining your health why don't you resign?

Washington, D. C.,
Aug. 3, 1937.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia R. F. D.
My dear Mrs. Sizzel:

In the Congressman's continued absence I am glad to inform you that the Congressman is still doubtful what the ever normal granary is, but he is giving considerable thought to the matter. I am glad to give you the happy news, however, that he hopes to find a satisfactory solution before Congress adjourns.

I regret to learn that you expect a bad winter.

It is estimated that this session of Congress will cost about twelve million dollars.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

P. S.—I am sure that the Congressman is even willing to ruin his health for the sake of his constituents.

Petunia, R. F. D.
Aug. 5, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

My husband, Mr. Sizzel, says that if this Congress only costs us 12 million dollars we would be lucky. But he figures it has cost us nearer 12 billion, and he can't see how we are going to pay it.

I see from the papers that they are talking about adjourning Congress every day and you have still not done anything about helping the farmers.

Your constituent,
MRS. LOTTA SIZZEL.

Washington D. C.
Aug. 7, 1937.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia, R. F. D.
Dear Mrs. Sizzel:

Let me assure you that I am giving the farm problem a most exhaustive study and that I have not given up hope. You can be certain that I will not desert my best friends.

Due to circumstances beyond my control, such as the Supreme Court controversy, we were unable to complete reorganization of the Government at this session. But I am insisting that we do this at the earliest possible moment next session, and I shall introduce the Fulpan Plan early in January. This plan, which I am not willing to divulge at the moment, will, I anticipate, astonish the country.

I am afraid that my good friend, Mr. Sizzel, has the wrong impression of our expenditures, and I am glad to inform you that I will never permit any of my constituents to be called upon to repay the money which the Government has found necessary to expend.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to hear from you, I am,

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia, R. F. D.
Aug. 10, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am glad to hear that you are giving the farm problem an exhaustive study, but my husband, Mr. Sizzel, says you are about to exhaust his patience. He says that if you don't come to a solution soon about their problem the farmers around here will solve your problem for you next year by keeping you at home.

At the beginning of the crop year we left a lot of land idle, expecting you to pass a law to have the Government rent it. And now it is too late to do anything about it and you are about to let Congress go home without renting it. What are you going to do?

Your constituent,
MRS. LOTTA SIZZEL.

P. S. Who are Mr. Corcoran and Mr. Cohen I have been reading so much about?

Washington, D. C.
August 12, 1937.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia R. F. D.
My Dear Mrs. Sizzel:

I regret to inform you that the Congressman's head is again causing him trouble. He is so concerned over the farm problem that he often sits until late at night giving it his most serious thought.

I regret that Congress does not have the power to rent your land, and I fear that even Congressman Fulpan cannot give it this power without a constitutional amendment.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to report this progress on the part of Congressman Fulpan in solving your problem, I am,

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—Some say that Mr. Cocoran and Mr. Cohen have been doing a good deal of thinking for Congress, but of course no one has thought for Congressman Fulpan.

Petunia R. F. D.
August 14, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

My husband, Mr. Sizzel, says your head is also giving us trouble. He says that unless you think fast Congress is going to adjourn on you and leave all of us in a plight. My husband, Mr. Sizzel, says that if it does we won't be able to get any money for our crops this year and you won't be able to get any votes for yourself next year.

What am I going to do about my new set of fall clothes?

Your constituent,
MRS. LOTTO SIZZEL.

P. S.—Mr. Hawks says he is sure no one ever thought for Congressman Fulpan, not even Congressman Fulpan. I don't believe he likes you, do you?

Washington, D. C.
August 16, 1937.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia R. F. D.
My Dear Mrs. Sizzel:

I regret to inform you that the Congressman's head has improved, but he has had to retire with a sore throat. Yesterday he practiced with a select quartet in preparation for the adjournment of Congress. The Congressman always sings tenor in the quartet that leads the good-by singing adjournment day and his colleagues during his many years here have begun to look upon this as a very important part of adjournment.

The Congressman has not given up hope of passing a farm bill at this session, but he believes it advisable for you not to make a definite selection of your fall clothes until you hear further from him.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to hear from you, I am Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia R. F. D.
August 18, 1937

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Congress is about to quit on you and you still haven't done anything to help us. How are you going to explain this to the people here, when you made your promises last year?

Hezekiah Hawks, who was over here again yesterday, said you were not going to explain. He said he had never heard you explain anything yet but that he was going to see to it that you were not going to get by with it any longer. He said if you could perform like you can promise, you'd be a whiz or something.

Your constituent,
Mrs. LOTTO SIZZEL.

Washington, D. C.
August 20, 1937

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia R. F. D.
Dear Mrs. Sizzel:

I appreciate your friendship and I assure you that I am doing all in my power to help you. It sometimes happens that even a leader cannot get everything he desires. I have insisted that a farm bill be passed but I have met with some rebuffs. However, I am still hopeful, and if I should not succeed this time I expect to insist upon a stronger discipline at the next session, and I can assure you that I will prove myself the farmer's best friend. In fact I may insist on a special session.

A Fulpan promise is a Fulpan promise.

With best regards, I am
Your friend.
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia R. F. D.
August 22, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I see where Congress has adjourned. My husband, Mr. Sizzel, says that he hopes the Congressman's colleagues enjoyed his tenor, as he doesn't believe they will have this pleasure many more times.

Every time I look at my last fall's hat I can't help but think of what you didn't do to help us.

Your former constituent.
MRS. LOTTA SIZZEL.

P. S.—My husband, Mr. Sizzel, says you didn't explain what a Fulpan promise is, but he thinks he knows now.

Washington, D. C.
August 24, 1937.

Mrs. Lotta Sizzel,
Petunia, R. F. D.
My dear Mrs. Sizzel:

I am replying to your letter in the absence of the Congressman. He left for home immediately after adjournment and didn't even wait to sing in the quartet. In fact, there was no singing this year, not even at the White House. I am sure that he will see you personally within the next few days.

I trust that you will come to no definite conclusions until Congressman Fulpan has had the opportunity to explain the matters to you. I am sure that when his constituents in your community understand what sacrifices he has made for them they will give him their enthusiastic support.

Trusting that you will receive the Congressman with open arms, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

Happy Days

By Bett Hooper

"Life With Mother."

DOG DAYS, cotton clothes, and light literature are upon us. The first is a misfortune, the second a necessity, and the third an unwarranted abomination. All the little librarians are busy wetting their pencils with their tongues in the preparation of what, for lack of a better name, is called "light summer fiction." These lists are made up of what the publishers fondly, but mistakenly, believe to be the people's choice during the days when it's too hot to indulge in any more strenuous exercise than turning the leaves of a book.

This is a popular theory that has no foundation. The long, leisurely days of June, July and August are best for absorbing gradually the titanic tomes of Wolfe and the less weighty, but no less meaty, reading matter of his feminine gender. Miss Woolf. The Saroyans, the Seymours, the Delafields, and other writers of street-car literature have a natural coziness which should, by all odds, be taken like hot tea when winter winds howl outside. This is a moon to which I have bayed long and lustily in vain. But I suppose I might as well cut out the Elsie Dinsmore act and change to the Pollyanna routine with all the glib cheerfulness of a mistress of ceremonies.

So, ladies and gentlemen, the first number rendered by your bloody but unbowed moon-bayer will be "Happy Days Are Here Again," meaning of course the priceless jottings of the late Clarence Day. It seems incredible that the backs of envelopes and mundane tax memoranda should yield anything so infinitely precious as these candid camera snaps of the Day family, if that modern metaphor is permissable in connection with horse-and-buggy recollections. But Clarence Day was not an author to settle himself with dozens of sharpened pencils and a pad bought for the purpose. He usually grabbed the nearest piece of paper at hand and it is from such scraps that his widow has assembled this account of her husband's "Life With Mother."

• • • •

IN "LIFE WITH FATHER," the reader got the impression that he was gazing on a family scene through badly focused field glasses. One lens was adjusted so that Father, large as life and twice as natural, fairly hit the onlooker in the eye with his strutting, bellowing portrayal in the part of head of a household into which he had cast himself. Through the other lens one could barely see Mother as she busied herself looking after the four Day boys and the fighting Bantamm who she had married. Now the glasses have been posthumously adjusted and Clarence's Mother assumes her rightful proportions. No more will a sympathetic public be inclined to exclaim "Poor Mrs. Day" for in this volume it is proven beyond all doubt that she "could take it." Moreover, she always gave as good as she got.

No matter how charming or how dynamic they appear in their son's books, the fact remains that most of the time both Mr. and Mrs. Day were pretty disagreeable people. In common, they had arrogance, snobbishness, intolerance, and an impatience with human frailties. Their difference lay in the way in which they vented their ill humor. Father snorted, yelled, put down his foot and considered that the end of an argument. Mother snapped, nagged, and clung to a prejudice until she wore down even Father's granite surface. But because they are not shouting at us or picking at as, we can read about them with a smiling equanimity that would have frozen on our faces had we had the misfortune to displease them.

Father suffered from elephantiasis of the ego; Mother from an inability to penetrate his thick hide.

THERE WAS, for instance, the little matter of an engagement ring. Or rather, the absence of one. Father had once had a ring returned to him and he was sour on the whole idea of love's young dream set in gold. And it was not until they had been married many years and had growing children that Mother decided she had been done out of her rights in not getting a betrothal symbol. Father explained to her again and again the senselessness, damn it, of presenting an engagement ring to the mother of strapping sons. But Mother was adamant especially after she learned of the one he had once given to another lady before he met Mother.

The result was that he dug up the half-forgotten ring, which was only a very puny band with two tiny diamonds, and gave it to Mother. She took it to Tiffany's and had it reset with three fine pearls. This apparently contented her. Alas and alack, the three fine pearls were Father's favorite studs.

Father liked to gallop down shady country roads, provided it smelled of newmown hay and pure country air. He had no patience whatsoever of farm land that reeked of pigs and unpleasant stock smells. Mother liked to travel on trains as long as they were well-behaved trains. But if they wouldn't wait for her, or if they went too fast, or if they were late in arriving, she donounced them roundly for the blackguards they were.

• • • •

GOD MAY HAVE been in his heaven but all was not right with the world if all was not right with the Days. Yet their son, Clarence, has imbued their faults with such fun; given to their quarrels such a quaint quixotism; and whitewashed the whole scene with so much of his own whimsy and wit that the book is sheer delight from the time we look on "Life With Mother" when she was a girl until she lay in her coffin, a very elegant little corpse in velvet, surrounded by orchids, and quiet for the first time.

"LIFE WITH MOTHER," by Clarence Day. (Alfred Knopf, $2.)

"THEY NEVER GET TIRED," by Catharine Macadam. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., $2.)

This isn't National Family Day or anything like that but I thought as long as I was reviewing a book on one family I might as well make a fell swoop and take in all the F. F. V's (Families Fighting for Victuals) on my shelves.

Truth is not only stranger than fiction but sometimes a lot more interesting. That is true in the case of "Life With Mother" and "They Never Get Tired." Miss Macadam has done her best, and her best considering she is only 20, is way above average. Maybe it was modesty that made this young authoress think she couldn't rely on her own ideas. So she proceeds to drag in bits reminiscent of "The Constant Nymph," "Flaming Youth," and "The Royal Family" which makes me laugh and laugh because I knew all the time she could have gone further under her own steam.

Miss Macadam's crazy family of Rivetts live a life of understatement. An affair means no more to them than a passing attraction to normal people; an illegitimate baby is passed off as lightly as a summer shower.

If there weren't so many other authors who will "bear watching" as the publishers so quaintly put it, I would love to sit back and anticipate Miss Macadam's second book. But you can do that; I'd rather watch Eleanor Green.

I had to laugh, upon looking up my "doodles" in this little booklet to find that mine indicates that I "have an instinctive fear of open water" and that it is my "fear of the ocean" which keeps me at home . . . The Postilion

Hollywood Buries Many Tunes.

Hollywood, Aug. 23.—Anything is possible in Hollywood! Where but in Hollywood can you mislay a seven passenger automobile?

I had a grand job figuring out just how it happened, because in about 5,000 miles of travel up and down the country, I hadn't even mislaid my other pair of socks.

The driver of the studio car let me out at the entrance to the Paramount lot. He said that he would wait for me, as instructed, and take me out to Bel-Air to see W. C. Fields. Fifteen minutes later I was retracing my steps to Johnny del Valle's desk.

"It's gone," I told him.

"What's gone?" he wanted to know.

I told him that the studio car had in some mysterious manner disappeared. Johnny called up the studio garage, the policeman on the beat, then sent out a search party.

"There goes the searching party," Johnny told me.

I looked out and saw a tall vacant eyed youth slowly pedaling by the office window. He had been sent out on a bicycle to trace down a Cadillac!

• • • •

After a while he came by again, and this time he appeared rather wistful, as he pronounced his judgement.

"It's gone" he said.

"We were afraid of that," Johnny told him.

"That's what I feared," the cyclist said solemnly and with dignity, he rode away.

I asked Johnny del Valle if it were quite the accepted thing in Hollywood to mislay seven passenger cars, and then to trace them down with boys on bicycles. Johnny said that it wasn't at all unusual. He said that he wanted to make sure however, that I didn't get lost myself, or they'd have to turn in a riot call and send out two of their best sleuths on a tandem bike. To avoid that possibility he would personally accompany me out to Bill Field's house.

When we arrived at Field's house, there were a number of cars parked in the drive at the side. Among them I recognized my "phanthom motor." I strolled over to the driver.

"Get a good interview" he asked, smilingly.

"Interview with whom," I asked.

"Why, with Bill Fields," he said

"I haven't been inside yet," I told him.

"Well then where have you been all this time?" he asked.

"I just got here" I said.

"Quit your kiddin'."

"No kidding," I said, "I just came out here in that car over there, after you disappeared from the studio."

"You what?" The chauffeur's mouth dropped.

"I just arrived," I insisted.

"Well, if you ain't the guy that rode out here with me," he said, "who the devil is the fellow I've been cartin' around for the last half hour?"!!

I didn't know the answer to that one. I didn't worry too much about it either, because anything is possible in Hollywood!

• • • •

Most of the "loonier" aspects of Hollywood, can be explained away, but they still rate as first rank oddities. For example, on any studio lot, you can hear of hundreds of "song hits" that never will be heard publicly. They're embalmed in the studio "morgue."

Then there are the studio restaurants. I don't believe there's a studio restaurant in Hollywood which pays for itself, and yet you can buy anything from caviar to partridge at ridiculously low prices.

The consistent loss of studio restaurants is charged up to savings in "time and temperament." It all works out very logically, but I suspect that it took Hollywood to think of it."

Their reasoning on the time element isn't so difficult to understand, but Hollywood is even prepared to figure out "temperament" in terms of dollars and cents.

They explain that if they didn't serve food cheaply in the restaurant the extras would go off the lot, for lunch and report late for work. While they lose on the restaurant they figure that they save on the shooting time, and the waste from tardiness.

As for the temperament, they've reduced that to dollars and cents. The sum of their reasoning in this regard is, that if some of the foreign stars couldn't get the dishes of their native land, they might sulk. Now they might want their native dishes only a few times a month, but the studios feel that it saves them to be constantly prepared to fill that occasional order.

Possibly the looniest of the Hollywood traditions is the "morgue."

Drop in at the stucco building which houses Paramount's "Tin Pan Alley," and ask Leo Robin or Ralph Rainger, about it. They'll begin flipping open filing cabinets and loading sheet music on the piano.

Then since Robin and Rainger are obliging fellows, as well as ace composers, they'll begin to sing and play some of the tunes from the "morgue."

This one's a beauty" they'll tell you, and you'll find your feet tapping in agreement.

"This one was a sure fire hit, in 'Waikiki Wedding,' and it's too bad we didn't use it."

Leo Robin will tell you, as he wrings haunting Hawaiian strains from the keyboard of the grand piano. "It's too bad that we had to cut it out for some reason or other," he'll add, "because now you'll probably never hear it, except right here in this room."

You ask the boys why they don't throw some of these tunes into the pictures, and you learn that that simply isn't done. No, indeed, music must be written especially for the pictures. These songs had their chance. They were written for some picture but "cut" before release, for anyone of a hundred reasons. The reasons probably had nothing to do with the quality of the song.

Enough tunes to keep America dancing for years, have been buried in Hollywood's morgue, and you are given to understand that it all makes sense. Possibly it does.

TOM McCARTHY.

Air Mail to Cleveland From Philadelphia Cut

By the Associated Press.

Postmaster General Farley ordered United Airlines Transport Corporation yesterday to cut down its airmail service between Philadelphia and Cleveland, via Allentown, Pa., to one round trip a day.

A second round trip now being made must be canceled by Monday, the order directed. Postoffice Department officials said the Airlines' present contract called for only one trip a day, yet the second trip was inaugurated July 20, this year.

Deadline Extended On Business Levy

The deadline for payment of business privilege taxes under the District tax act was extended yesterday by the District Commissioners from September 16 to October 3.

These tax payments, which will be based on a levy of two-fifths of 1 per cent of gross receipts in 1936, were at first ordered payable within 30 days from the signing of the act.

The change permits business taxpayers to make deductions for personal property tax payments, as allowed by the act, as the deadline for the latter had been extended previously until October 31

Recent organization of the Interior Department Recreation Association is the result of a demand from employes which has been growing for some time and has culminated in the election of a capable governing body of officers.

BARRETT.

Hillory A. Tolson, president of I. D. R. A., is a G. W. U. four-year letter man. He was a member of relay team at Penn relays, 1921-1924. With A. B. and A. M. degrees from George Washington, and LL. Mrs. Fred W. Johnson, wife of Commissioner of Land Office, brought those 10-gallon sombreros to I. D. R. A. inaugural.

Marriage.

Observation reveals the enlightening fact that girls' chances for getting married are lessened when they enter Federal employment. Their contacts with the outside business world and young single men are broken off. There are no bosses to marry, for those in the departments are older and already married. Further, with an assured income from Uncle Sam, they acquire too much independence in the first blush of youth. After a few years of "living alone and liking it" are gone—it is then usually too late.

D. C. Visitors Will Set New Record High

Number Up to July, 1936, Exceeded This Year by 50,000.

42 Millions Make Use of Park's Facilities in Two Years.

They started coming in January for the inauguration, and they have kept right on coming, by plane, trailer, bus, limousine and Model T, until by now Washington's 1937 tourist traffic has set an unofficial all-time high.

In the spring, they came for the cherry blossom festival In July, it was the Boy Scout Jamboree. And in between they just came for a vacation and a glimpse of the Capital.

The Washington Tourist Camp has been turning away as many as 200 wouldbe patrons a night. And on the other extreme, the Mayflower Hotel expects a 65 per cent increase over last year for the months of July and August.

Armed with their cameras, lines of visitors have encircled the base of the Washington Monument all day long waiting for space in the crowded elevator. By July 1, 628,273 of them had gone up in the shaft. During July, 163,836 more visited the Monument—nearly three times as the number for the same month in 1932, and 50,000 more than in July, 1936.

Passes Million Mark.

Attendance at the Smithsonian Institution hit the million mark during July. Adding 20 per cent to the Smithsonian figures to account for visitors who lack time or inclination to visit museums during their stay, the Greater National Capital Committee estimates this year's tourist crop exceeds that of 1932 by 367,172. The George Washington Bicentennial celebration in 1932 established that year as a high, with an approximate influx of 100,000 between January and July.

An aggregate of 42,000,000 have made use of the city's park facilities, from highways to park benches, during 1936-1937, according to National Capital Parks. While this figure of course includes many repeaters and probably more District residents than outsiders, the fact that it is 2,000,000 higher than for the 1935-36 period undoubtedly proves something.

Capitol guides believe their business is 30 per cent better this year than last, indicating a greater willingness on the part of tourists to spend money during their stay and a slightly higher proportion of persons coming here for the first time.

Estimate Impossible.

It would be impossible to estimate the percentage of tourists who come to Washington because they have a son, a daughter or a third cousin twice removed working for the Government. Whatever the percentage, the actual number has gone 'way, 'way up in the last year or so, following the increase in Government personnel.

But whether they come because of a relative in the Government or a raise in pay, they keep on coming. Prospects of a bigger and better President's Cup Regatta indicate traffic may continue even after Labor Day.

Big Sub-Sea Boat And a Dredge for Army Launched

Two ships—a submarine and a dredge—were launched in New England by the Navy yesterday.

The submarine was the U. S. S. Snapper, with a displacement of 1,435 tons. She took to the waters off Portsmouth, N. H., where three sister ships now are under construction. Christening the glistening underwater craft was Mrs. Harold R. Stark, wife of Rear Admiral Stark, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance.

The dredge, the General Goethels, is the largest sea-going hopper dredge of its type in the world. It was launched at Fore River Shipyards, Quincy, Mass.

Constructed for the Army, the vessel is named after Gen. George Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal. She was christened by Miss Elizabeth E. Pillsbury, daughter of Brig. Gen. G. B. Pillsbury, assistant chief of Army engineers.

HOLC Employes To Set Up Clinic

The Group Health Association, Inc., an organization for health security launched among employes of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, will go into operation here September 1, it was learned last night.

The association will sponsor a clinic, headed by Dr. Henry Brown, formerly of the Veterans' Administration, at which employes who subscribe will be entitled to medical care.

Present rates call for a $2.20 family rate and a $3.30 family rate, according to W. F. Penniman, assistant general manager of the HOLC, who heads the asssociation as president.

Penniman said that employes of his organization have been furnished with application blanks for admittance to the health group. He refused to say, however, how many had already entered.

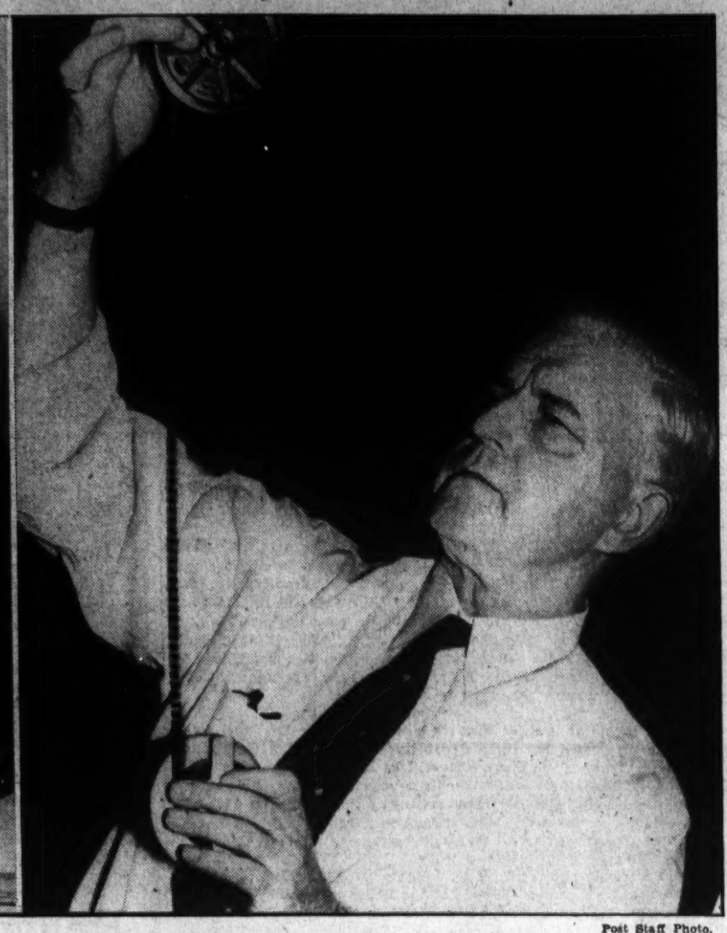
If You're Over 37, the Census Bureau Has the Facts Of Your Life Recorded on Film Safe From Elements

Miss Bertha Bonta, one of the workers engaged in photographing the records, looks at the final form of the film, which has been developed and now is being projected. The projectors are for the use of bureau officials as well as the hordes of genealogists who descend on them each year.



Post Staff Photo.

Dr. T. F. Murphy, chief statistician of the Bureau of the Census, examines a roll of census records, reduced to 18 mm. films. Each name is about the size of a pin point, but it can be enlarged by means of a projector. Thus the records of tens of millions of Americans are taken and preserved through the Census Bureau.

If you are over 37 years of age and your name begins with A, B or C, the chances are that the chief facts of your life are now recorded photographically by the Census Bureau and are stored in the Commerce Building, safe from the fires and floods of the years to come.

About six million names from the 1900 census have been filed in this manner. The other 70 million will be completed by next June, according to Dr. Timothy F. Murphy of the bureau. Twenty-four WPA workers, who probably never thought they would end up as photographers, are engaged in the task of reproducing index cards on 16 mm. film.

Your name doesn't look much on this narrow strip of film, it might be added. In fact, you never would be able to pick it out from the other 8,000 or so which are crowded on the 100-foot roll. But insert it in one of the bureau's projectors and it becomes enlarged to such an extent that nobody would ever doubt the fact that you existed in 1900.

Reason for Adoption.

The bureau adopted this "microfilm" process partly for that very reason. People are always asking for a certificate showing when they were born. Since the advent of social security and the consequent renaisance of interest in vital statistics, the bureau sometimes has as many as 350 such requests a day.

"Not that they're not sure of their birthdays," the bureau explains, "but it's just as the late Will Rogers said, 'The fact that a man is running around with pants on doesn't prove he was born.'" What they want is written proof, and they figure that it's easier to ask the Census Bureau than to dig through the attic for their birth certificate or the family Bible.

Fearful that their invaluable record books and cards would be reduced to dust by so much thumbing, Dr. Murphy inaugurated the filming process last January. The method itself is about 10 years old, but never before has the Government used it on such a large scale. In fact, two of the cameras were "invented to order" by the Eastman Kodak Co. so the large double sheets of the census books might be photographed in one step.

The film can be projected over and over again without damage. Moreover the rolls can all be stored within easy reach around the walls of one of the Census Bureau's offices, whereas the original records in 5-pound books, occupy almost a mile of shelving and must be removed from vaults each time they are used.

Easy to Store.

Unlike motion picture film, which it resembles in appearance, "microfilm" is not inflammable and is easy to store. The bottom drawer of each file cabinet contains a pan of water to keep it moist and a "humiguide" attached at the top of the cabinet indicates any deviation from the 55 per cent humidity which has been found the most satisfactory atmosphere.

Water does not harm it either, Dr. Murphy told of a Pittsburgh bank which, after the recent flood, dug its microfilm records out of the mud, washed them off, and put them back in the files. And even if something should happen to the bureau's set, a duplicate can always be made from the negative for a few cents.

The bureau strated out with the 1900 census because officials figured it was one which would be in great demand for social security applicants. All 76 million names returned that year were transferred from books to index cards a year ago. At the same time the cards are being photographed, the ponderous volumes dating from 1830 and 1850 have been reproduced on 35 mm. film, and work has been started on the 1860 census.

Auto Deaths Soar to 109 Here in Year

Police Report Gain of 7 Deaths in Period; 4,662 Hurt.

Accidents Hit 12,882, Increase of 3,267; Injuries Climb.

In a report that tended to show Washingtonians in general to be careful drivers, 109 traffic fatalities and 4,662 personal injuries were recorded yesterday in the annual report of the Police Court covering the last fiscal year.

The report indicated that Washington motorists were careful when it came to major traffic offenses—violations commonly supposed to be the principal causes of accidents—but less careful about minor infractions.

The figures for traffic deaths was seven above the previous year. The toll of injuries showed an increase of 506.

The report was made to Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal by Assistant Corporation Counsel John O'Dea. It showed that, while traffic complaints increased by 2,790, decreases were reported for major offenses.

Accident reports made by police aggregated 12,882, or an increase of 3,267.

Thus, instances of driving while drunk fell by 27, leaving after colliding by 206, first offense speeding by 1,863, third offense speeding by 17, reckless driving by 68, passing street cars by 68 and bad brakes by 87.

Cases totaled 34,085 fo rthe year ended June 30, last, as against 31,295 for the previous year.

The increase was all found in "minor traffic charges," which cover overtime parking. These jumped 4,316.

Cases filed in the police court proper decreased by 2,505, with intoxication complaints showing a drop of 1,462. The only substantial rise last year was in vagrancy cases. The increase was 275. Disorderly conduct cases fell 604.

Jury trials rose 244 over the previous fiscal year to a total of 1,144. Convictions showed a substantial increase, while acquittals fell proportionately.

A total of 55,642 persons forfeited collateral on traffic charges in station houses last year, while 10,536 did the same thing on police regulations. Cash collected as fines and forfeitures at police court and at station houses aggregated $475,679.92.

Parley Called For New Fight On Abattoir

Ickes Still Has Hopes of Blocking Gobel Slaughterhouse.

A conference of experts from two Federal agencies and the District Government on the Gobel abattoir problem was called yesterday by Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners.

Letters were sent by Hazen to Surgeon General Thomas Parran and Secretary Ickes, inviting them to participate

The conference was suggested by Ickes, who has not yet abandoned hope of blocking construction of an abattoir in Benning by the Adolf Gobel Co., despite the refusal of Congress to pass corrective legislation.

Correspondence between Ickes and Hazen relative to the conference was made public yesterday by Ickes' office.

Construction of the $500,000 slaughter house, held up while Congress pondered legislation to block it, was started a week before Congress adjourned.

Among the bills introduced was one by Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, which would authorize the Commissioners to regulate the amount of waste an industrial plant may dispose of through the city's sewage plant.

Surgeon Gen. Parran has estimated that the waste from the Gobel slaughter house would be equal to the domestic sewage of a population of 140,000 persons.

Secretary Ickes, in a letter to Commissioner Hazen, said plans of the company, together with other considerations, had convinced him the proposed slaughter house "will constitute a thorough nuisance to the District, and certainly a menace to its new sewage disposal plant."

Man Accused of Speeding Boat In Harbor Here Forfeits Bond

Glenn Cory Fails to Appear on Charge of Going Faster Than 15 Miles an Hour; Police Say Offense Is Rare.

Glenn Cory, 30, 1022 G street northeast, who was arrested Saturday for exceeding the speed limit for boats, failed to appear in Police Court yesterday, forfeiting $30 bail.

Speeding is rare in the channel, harbor police said. Only six cases have been heard during two years. Cory was the second offender of the summer.

There is a speed limit of 15 land miles an hour. Capturing speeders on water is different from a squad car chase on the highway. Harbor police boats are designed to be slow but sure, and their top speed is only 18 land miles an hour. So the harbor patrolmen simply stay on their dock, stop-watch in hand, and time the suspected speeder by marks on Hains Point seawall. He has to land sometime and then they pounce.

The speed limit was imposed because of the danger to other shipping from the swell which even a small boat moving at high speed throws up.

Pre-Autumn Chill With Rain Today, Warmer Tomorrow

Residents of the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia continued to shiver yesterday in a pre-autumnal chill.

Intermittent rain and continually cloudy skies held the temperature to a maximum of 68, while a minimum of 64 was recorded shortly before 7 o'clock yesterday morning.

Little change in temperature was predicted for today. The weather man added conditions would be partly cloudy, with occasional rains. Tomorrow may be slightly warmer, he said.

Part Payments To Speed Work On Waterfront

Army Agrees to Allow D. C. to Spread Its Share of Costs.

Use of the installment plan may speed the start of Washington's waterfront improvement plan, it developed yesterday.

Through an agreement reached between Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, Army engineer chief, and the Budget Bureau, the District will not have to pay its $389,000 share of the $1,650,000 project in a lump sum.

Instead, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said, the Commissioners will ask for a $68,000 appropriation as an initial payment. Remaining payments, he explained, may extend over the entire eight years of the development program or may be cleaned up in two or three years. They will be provided for in the regular appropriation bills.

In the past, it has been the War Department's policy to begin improvements to rivers or harbors only after a community has contributed its full share of the cost. However, as Gen. Markham has funds at his disposal, it was believed he could begin work on the District project when he wishes.

Screen Recruit Gets $400 Each Week But Idles

Puzzled Reporter, Turned Film Writer, Wonders What It's About.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 24.—Remember the magazine article by P. G. Wodehouse, who claimed that Hollywood hired him at a fabulous salary to write stories for the movies and then gave him absolutely nothing to do?

Well, sir, this kind of dizzy business is no fable even today; it's a fact—and for reasons which nobody is able to explain. Latest example concerns a friend of ours, a newspaperman, who came out from New York with the proper introductions. These he took to the head of one of the biggest studios and asked him for a job writing film plays.

"I'm sorry there are no good positions available right now," Mr. Big apologized, "but if you wouldn't mind taking a minor place, maybe we can find something for you later."

"How much salary goes with this minor job?" asked our friend, seeing all his hopes of fame and fortune vanishing.

"Oh, I guess we can sign you up for about $400 a week, until a good spot actually comes along," the movie chieftain said.

Our friend, who didn't know there was that much money, recovered promptly—he being used to unusual developments—and signed on the dotted line. His new boss told him to look around town a while, find a place to live, and then report to work. That was three weeks ago.

A Job But No Work.

Last night we called upon him in his new home in Beverly Hills, a smallish mansion, which he rented furnished, including bowling green, fish pond, summer garden, patios and what not—mostly velvet draped. We took a ride in his new limousine, which he bought on time payments so he could keep up his position as a scenario writer; we admired the efficiency of his Negro chauffeur-houseman, and we listened—open-mouthed.

"I figured," said our friend unhappily, "that since they were paying me so much, they'd want me to work and work hard. So I reported next day and what did they do?

"They showed me my office, and is it elegant! They introduced me to my secretary, who is blonde and a swell looker. Then they shook hands and said they'd see me again some time.

"I wanted to start work, but they said they didn't have any work for me to do. They said not to hang around the office. They must have figured I'd be in the way, because they said for me to go home and sit down and wait for them to call me. I've been waiting now for nearly a month, and my phone hasn't jingled once. I've got three pay checks so far—that's $1,200—and I'm almost afraid to spend it. It doesn't seem real. Nothing does." Our friend poured himself another drink and we sympathized with him. Honest we did.

Telephone of Gold.

Australia won't see that Warner Brothers film 'King and the Chorus Girl," because the hero, Fernand Gravet, looks too much like the Duke of Windsor . . . Joy Hodges, Universal singing star, received from Count Louis de Volrue in France a golden telephone, encrusted with jewels—as a sort of gentle hint . . . She hasn't phoned him with it yet because she can't make the danged thing work . . . Luise Rainer arrived here from New York with only one dress to her name, the one she wore on her back . . . Clifford Odets, her playwriting husband, hid all the others in protest against her returning to Hollywood . . . Loretta Young and Virginia Bruce, who look superb in evening gowns on the screen, aren't so spiffy on the set . . . Whenever their feet don't show in the picture, they wear old house slippers, to ease their toes.

Columbia Pictures got some live fireflies to perform in "Madame Butterfly," now shooting . . . It doesn't have to pay 'em union wages it just caught 'em and let 'em fly in front of the camera . . . Billy House, the he-man comedian, is wearing eyebrows as false as those of any soubrette . . . He had to shave his own off, when Universal gave him a female impersonation part.

'Dead End' Author To View Premiere

Sidney Kingsley, playwright and scenarist, will attend the premiere of Samuel Goldwyn's "Dead End," the picturization of his Broadway success, at the Rivoli Theater, next Tuesday. One of the most important offerings on the Goldwyn program for the new season, "Dead End" was filmed with an imposing cast headed by Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea and Humphrey Bogart. The line-up of supporting players includes Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor, Allen Jenkins and the famous sextet of "Dead End" kids who appeared originally in the New York stage presentation.

William Wyler, who was responsible for the Goldwyn hits, "These Three" and "Dodsworth," directed "Dead End" from the screen play by Lillian Hellman. Alfred Newman, symphony maestro, orchestrated the musical score. The production is being released through United Artists.

About The Showshops

'Emile Zola,' Screened Preliminary to Premiere At National Tomorrow, Lives Up to Notices

Showing at Ambassador Theater Concludes Warner Bros. Exhibit; Midweek Openings Include 'Dark Journey' at Rialto Today and 'Make a Wish' at Keith's Tomorrow; Other Amusement.

By Gerald G. Gross

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

THE private audience, consisting principally of exhibitors and civic and educational leaders, applauded spontaneously and without stint yesterday at the close of "The Life of Emile Zola." And well they might. "Zola" is not merely another biographical film; it is a glorious experience in the theater, a creation which deserves the kind of unconditional praise accorded to anything great, be it a race horse or a soldier's sacrifice, a perfect gem or a moving picture.

This purports to be no review of what some have called the successor to "The Story of Louis Pasteur"—that will come along in due time Friday morning, following the Thursday night premiere at the National—but we find it difficult to restrain ourselves from a brief commitment on the brilliant example of the screen's art which was unreeled yesterday afternoon at the Ambassador Theater.

For one thing, since "Pasteur" has been mentioned above and thus, perhaps, invited comparison, may we humbly submit that "Zola" is far and away a better picture than the other. If Paul Muni won the Academy Award for his portrayal of the French bacteriologist, then he is entitled to the same honor—with palms—for his portrayal of the French author.

"Pasteur" was an excellent film, but, we believe, not quite so colossal as the reputation it achieved. It, too, got a pretentious advance build-up and we feel a tiny bit let down when, with all the drum-beating dutifully absorbed by our cinema consciousness, we left the theater after witnessing the production all the shooting was about.

Not so with "Zola." Only the fates, unless any sinister, man-made factors are involved in the selection of Academy winners, know who will be tapped for his and her acting, directorial, productional, etc., efforts for 1937. Yet right now, as far as we are concerned, the Academy may "throw the book" at "Zola" and consider a good day's work done.

For its script, acting, direction and production, "The Life of Emile Zola" earns a niche in the theater, stage or screen, which is achieved by too painfully few plays. Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., adds immeasurably to its prestige by having sponsored it.

* * * *

And so the local Warner theaters wound up their "national exhibit," or preview derby, with five pictures having been shown in two days. "Zola" is the first which will be made public, as it were, hereabouts. The others will begin their parade into the Earle next month. Representing a fair cross-section of the company's 1937-38 output, they are "Varsity Show," "Back in Circulation," "It's Love I'm After" and "That Certain Woman."

* * * *

Of more immediate interest, "Dark Journey" will ease Jack Benny off his "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round" at the Rialto today and, in another mid-week opening, "Make a Wish" comes into RKO-Keith's tomorrow, with "Borneo" playing its last performances there today.

Costarring Conrad Veidt and Vivien Leigh in a drama of love and espionage in wartime Europe, "Dark Journey" has "Q-boats" for thrills, Veidt for characterization and Miss Leigh for pulchritude—and also acting.

"Make a Wish," as you should have learned before this, presents the incredibly seasoned voice and charming personality of little Bobby Breen; a Basil Rathbone totally different from the actor he was in, say, "Anna Karenina" or the forthcoming "Confession;" a Metropolitan Opera singer, Marion Claire, in her film debut and incidental music by Oscar Straus, who journeyed from his Vienna to Hollywood for the assignment.

Since we are still looking into the future, it may not be amiss to mention that "Big City" is announced for showing at Loew's Capitol the week of September 3—"Broadway Melody of 1938" is staying a second week, of course—and "Thin Ice" will be concurrent at the Palace.

Too, the Little remits the notice that "Under Two Flags" will follow "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," when and if that epochal comedy is eventually surrendered.

* * * *

Private screenings seem to be very much au fait, or something equally swank-sounding these days. The Warners' chummy get-together over, "The Spanish Earth" will be exposed tonight to the critical gaze of the Spanish Ambassador (maybe), other representatives of the Diplomatic Corps, newspaper correspondents and editors and the professional critics. Scene is the National Press Club Auditorium; time, 8:30. The preview, unlike the trade previewing just ended, will feature authentic scenes of horror instead of jazz ballets, bombardments of cities rather than artificial crises of love. Charles O. Gridley, Press Club president, has invited all members to attend gratis. Joris Ivens, the film's Dutch director, will be present. Here's hoping we can make it.

* * * *

Writes Edmund Plohn, genial manager of the National Theater:

"Here goes the opening gun for the new season at the National, a reader for 'Brother Rat,' which opens September 13."

Thereupon Mr. Plohn strips his heavy artillery for action to make it quite clear that "Brother Rat" is a story of military college life at V. M. I., based upon experiences there of the authors, John Monks, jr., and Fred F. Finklehoffe. Also that the play has no serious message to impart, received the blessing of the V. M. I. heads and comes here in the hands of the original New York company.

There is more, but that's enough to give you an idea, particularly since most of you undoubtedly have heard long since of the comedy's successful and lengthy run on Broadway.

And here comes another of those private assemblies. Manager Plohn reminds this desk to be present this noon for inspection of the National's new seats and other improvements which have been made in the last few weeks.

Hearken to the lament of J. W. W.: "I still adhere to the belief," he writes, "that some of the theater managers of Washington are great performers. On Sunday I arrived early at one of the most popular of the downtown theaters for the afternoon show. It was exactly 1:05 p. m. I patiently stood at the window reading my newspaper while the queue of intending purchasers formed a line behind me . . . At 1:20 the usher said: 'Please form the line not from the window, but straight along the curb!' Out we moved away from the window to the curb and at 1:30 the usher came out to the curb and . . . said, 'Now the window is open.' He was absolutely correct. But we at the curb couldn't get to the window because several bright souls who had been lazing near the window jumped in, got their money down and their tickets up before either the usher or the leaders of the waiting line could make the distance across the sidewalk. I don't blame those few beating the barrier with no one to prevent, but I still affirm that some of the theater managers are great performers."

Schulberg Renews Option on Trent

B. P. Schulberg yesterday exercised his option on John Trent, sewing up the young leading man for another period on his long term contract.

Trent was a pilot for T. W. A. up to one year ago, when the producer discovered him during a flight to New York.

His film debut occurred in "John Meade's Woman." He became a romantic leading man in his second picture, "A Doctor's Diary," repeated the performance in "The Great Gambini," and was elevated to costar ranking with Ann Dvorak in his fourth production, "She's No Lady."

Currently, Trent is appearing with Edward Arnold and Shirley Ross in "Blossoms on Broadway," Schulberg's musical extravaganza for Paramount.

Able Director.

"Stage Door," which co-stars Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers for the first time, was directed for RKO Radio by Gregory La Cava, ace director who megaphoned such film hits as "My Man Godfrey" and "Private Worlds."

Apollon's Accent Valued at $100,000

Dave Appolon's accent, 11 years old, is still as good as new, the Russian orchestra leader-comedian reported when he arrived at Universal Studios for rehearsals of the sequences in which he will appear in "Merry-Go-Round of 1938."

Dave's butchery of the King's English, which has been worth a fortune to him is one of his most valuable assets. He has his accent insured for $100,000 with a syndicate of London brokers, who will pay off if Apollon's English turns pure.

The brokers, in the terms of the policy, prohibit Apollon from taking diction lessons, attempting to introduce any dialect other than Russian in his performance, or from marrying any other than a Russian girl.

Handy Andes.

The lofty peaks of the Andes Mountains in South America provide a novel and colorful background of RKO Radio's thrilling drama of the skyways, "Flight From Glory." Chester Morris and Whitney Bourne head the cast.

Two Singers in 'Make a Wish'

Bobby Breen, 9-year-old screen and radio prodigy, and Marion Claire, of the Metropolitan Opera and the ether ways, as they appear in the feature attraction opening tomorrow at RKO-Keith's. Adding distinction to "Make a Wish" are the facts that Miss Claire makes her screen debut therein and the music was written by Oscar Straus, Viennese composer.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 24.—Personal Observations: Fred Astaire is the only actor in town who can be nonchalant while wearing a silk topper. When he smokes, Lionel Atwill twitches his nose like a rabbit. You would be surprised if you knew how many screen sirens wear glasses. Astrid Allwyn would much rather talk about her latest diet than about her latest picture. Whenever she is talking to anyone, Joan Crawford always leans forward and looks intent.

FRED ASTAIRE.

Mae West invariably refers to herself in the third person, as "West." Whenever she laughs, Carole Lombard throws back her head and shuts her eyes. John Barrymore has a habit of two-timing his cigarettes—he exhales the smoke through his mouth and at the same time re-inhales it through his nostrils (and don't blame me if you choke when you try it). Charles Bickford's voice always rises at the end of every statement, as though he were daring his listeners to contradict him. You can trail Myrna Loy around the studio by the scent of her perfume; it lingers for a full minute after she has passed.

Joel McCrea has a nervous habit of massaging the back of his neck. There is a girl out at M-G-M named Dixie Dean who looks enough like Dixie Crosby to be her sister. Wonder why it is that most directors prefer to shoot love scenes in the aftrenoon rather than in the morning? Virginia Bruce, off-screen, is the most perfectly groomed girl in Hollywood. If there is a flower in the room, Grace Moore always tries to park it in some man's lapel

My idea of the perfect way to spend a Sunday afternoon is to "just drop in" for one of Don Ameche's come-and-get-it-or-I'll-throw-it-away spahgetti dinners. The Ameches live on a ranch in the San Fernando Valley—and when I say "live," I mean exactly that. There isn't an ounce of fuss or pretense about either of them. Don, grinning from ear to ear, ties a checkered apron around his midriff and cooks spaghetti by the mile. The whole town is invited and the whole town usually comes. If there are not enough chairs, and there never are, you take your heaped-up platter and park on the floor, or in the patio, or anywhere else you like. And you eat. And laugh. And talk. And eat some more. And finally go home convinced that the swellest guy in this goofy business is a soft-voiced Italian named Don Ameche.

Nine-tenths of all the actors in Hollywood are guilty of a misdemeanor and should be either fined or imprisoned, and I can prove it. I've just discovered there is an ancient, but unrepealed, law in Los Angeles that maks it a crime to wear false whiskers without first obtaining a police permit. And I will not charge a cent for the tip if some press agents want to cook up a headline story.

Since I have written a few uncomplimentary anecdotes anent Frances Farmer's high-hattitude, it is only fair to tell about a generous thing she did the other day. Her stand-in, while putting on make-up, scratched her eye-ball with her finger nail and in an hour or so the eye was swollen shut and unbearably painful. Frances knew the girl had no money, so she summoned a taxi, sent her to one of Los Angeles' best eye specialists and paid the bill.

Speaking of stand-ins reminds me that I have been asked at least a dozen times why they must wear clothes exactly like those of their stars if they are never actually photographed. Here is the "why:" Each scene is "set-up" with the stand-in occupying the position that the star will take when the camera starts to whir, and the lights are arranged to suit the colors of the stand-in's clothes. If the star were to walk before the camera for the "take," wearing different apparel, the whole set-up would have to be altered.

Veteran Honored By Actor Friends

Richard Carle, veteran of 30 years in Broadway musical shows, and now working in Universal's comedy extravaganza, "Merry-Go-Round of 1938," was tendered a luncheon at the studio by members of the Lambs' Club.

Lambs' Club members, now working with Carle in the picture, and who honored him at the informal affair, included B. G. (Buddy) De Sylva, director Irving Cummings, composer Jimmy McHugh, scenarist Monte Brice and three noted comedians, Billy House, Bert Lahr and Jimmy Savo.

Ancient Piano Used In Columbia Film

One of the oldest pianos in existence, constructed prior to the discovery of electricity, was used in Hollywood this week in a sequence of Columbia's "Park Avenue Dame," in which Richard Arlen and Fay Wray head the cast.

Al Rogell, who is directing the picture, combed Hollywood thoroughly before discovering the piano of ancient vintage which is being used in the cinematic studio of Richard Arlen in his role of a commercial photographer.

The piece is estimated to be more than 200 years old. It is an old English upright piano manufactured by the famous Charles Gandy, one of the foremost piano manufacturers of his time. On each side of the antique are built-in candlesticks, used by the old masters in place of electric lights. The pedals are wooden and it contains the old-time sound box to amplify tones. It is hand-carved.

Rogell discovered it was picked up in New York years ago at a public auction and if its lineage could be accurately traced possibly would lead to the origination of some now famous musical masterpieces.

Happy Birthday.

Rowland Drew, playing the "heavy" in Universal's "Blonde Dynamite" had a birthday the day picture making began. He celebrated it by taking a healthy clout in the jaw from William Gargan, featured in the picture. But Drew had to take the punch and like it—it was in the script.

Tracy's Food Gag 'Gets' Miss Rainer

A feud was almost started on the set of "Big City" when Spencer Tracy put his foot down on the idea of serving food between scenes.

It was all brought about when Tracy decided to pull one of his famous "gags." At it happened, Luise Rainer, several pounds underweight, had been in the habit of taking little "snacks" between scenes.

One morning when Miss Rainer called for her cookies, he said there were none. Asked why, the prop man said that Tracy disapproved of the sight of food and had left instructions that none was to be served.

It wasn't until the next day that she learned of the "gag" and now she is out to get Tracy.

"Big City," one of the new season movies, is scheduled for an early showing here.

Japanese Rout Foe in Chahar; Trap 60,000

5 Chinese Divisions Are Cut Off as Nipponese Gain on 2 Fronts.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Tientsin (Wednesday), Aug. 25.—Japanese soldiers smashed into Chahar Province along two routes today and captured Kalgan, its principal city, trapping five Chinese divisions totaling 60,000 men between Kalgan and the strategic Nankow Pass.

Japanese bombing planes flew far to the west and rained death on Tatung-fu, an important military center on the border of Shansi and Suiyuan provances.

The trapped Chinese divisions were between Nankow and Kalgan around Hwailai, a station on the Peiping Suiyuan Railway. They were caught between powerful Japanese forces which had fought their way northwest through the Great Wall from Peiping and westward from Manchukuo, in the double invasion of Chahar.

Chinese Face Annihilation.

Foreign observers believed Japanese troops soon would dominate the Peiping-Suiyuan Railway as far as Kalgan and wipe out the Chinese troops in the vicinity unless they scatter to the hills and adopt guerilla tactics. The Chinese have an opportunity to dynamite the main Chinglungchiao tunnel at the summit of Nankow pass and thus delay Japanese use of the Railway for months.

"The worst part of the campaign northwest of Peiping along the Peiping-Suiyuan Railway is over," Lieut. Gen. Kiyoshi Katsuki, Japanese commander, announced at military headquarters here.

Katsuki long has considered the Peiping Suiyuan drive the most important of the North China campaign. It is designed to drive a wedge between Soviet controlled areas and China Proper, thus preventing Moscow from sending additional munitions to the Chinese.

Maj. Gen. Ishida's division has won through the historic Nankow pass 12 miles northwest of Peiping ending the bitter battle which has been under way there for more than a week, Katsuki revealed. The whole Chinese line along the Great Wall has been broken.

On the second line of attack, Japanese cavalry and motorized columns fighting their way westward across Chahar from the Japanese-controlled state of Manchukuo are nearing Kalgan, Gen. Tang's advance general headquarters.

Cavalry patrols twice have fought their way into the outskirts of the city and the Chinese barracks have been bombed repeatedly by Japanese planes.

Tatungfu Bombed.

Paotingfu, Southern Hopei Province (Wednesday), Aug. 25 (U.P.).—Eleven Japanese airplanes yesterday bombed Tatungfu, on the Peiping-Suiyuan railway, in northern Shansi Province, Chinese military headquarters announced today.

From 30 to 40 bombs were dropped and 20 Chinese soldiers were killed.

It was the first Japanese attack on Shansi Province—one of the first North China provinces marked for occupation by the Japanese army.

Tatungfu is a rear concentration point for Chinese armies fighting the Japanese northwest of Peiping.

The Chinese also reported that their troops, with Tientsin as their objective, had reached Yangliuching, the first station beyond Tientsin, after crushing desperate Japanese resistance.

Japanese Imperil U. S. Red Salmon, Alaskans Declare

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 24 (AP).—Alaskans spoke out today against what they termed a Japanese menace to the world's richest red salmon fishing area, in Bristol Bay.

Arrivals from the North territory said the presence of Japanese fishing boats off the Bristol Bay shore during the season just closed emphasized what they considered a tacit threat at American fishing grounds.

Technically the Japanese or any others are within their legal rights if they fish beyond the 3-mile limit, but Americans claim a prior right to the salmon of that area on the ground that they were spawned in Alaskan streams.

chief city of Chahar province, were bombed by Japanese planes.

Kalgan, on the Peiping-Suiyuan Railway northwest of Peiping, was seized by a swift-moving Japanese column after preliminary bombings had terrified inhabitants.

Thus the war which started outside Peiping the night of July 7 had spread over half of this vast country of 400,000,000 people today and a city of the southern provinces—Ningpo, long the residence of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek—had been attacked for the first time.

A Japanese military spokesman admitted Japanese troops fired on four American flags flying from the Wing-On cotton mill at Woosung, at the mouth of the Whangpoo, because Chinese were inside and were using American Red Cross and "red swastika" flags.

Bomb Concentrations.

Japanese forces in North China had passed the 100,000 mark while Chinese opposing them were estimated at more than 300,000.

Chinese planes bombed the big concentrations of Japanese warships and army transports at the mouth of the Yangtze twice yesterday and claimed to have inflicted heavy damages.

Two night attacks were made on the Japanese warships and land lines inside the International Settlement.

The first raid on the settlement was shortly after 10 p. m. when Chinese planes appeared over the International bund, circled to the northward, and then dived to within 800 feet of the ground dropping bombs toward two Japanese war vessels anchored off the Japanese consulate general, at the mouth of Soochow Creek, and on the Japanese positions to the northward in Hongkow.

None of the Japanese ships was hit, but the U. S. S. Augusta, flagship of the American Asiatic squadron, was menaced and tugs around her sent up dozens of colored flares to warn the Chinese fliers that they were endangering a friendly ship.

The two Americans wounded in Monday's bombing in upper Nanking road, Anthony Billingham, a correspondent of the New York Times, and Miss Blanche Tenney, born in Shanghai, are recovering.

Billingham was "resting comfortably" in country hospital at 3 a. m. "after a quiet night" and his physicians said he would recover.

Miss Tenney was sent home from the hospital and was "out of all danger."

The second Chinese night raid on the settlement centered on Hongkew where new fires were started.

The whole sky over the Hongkow district was red from reflected flames. Two large buildings were burning like torches.

Nanking Bombed Anew.

Nanking, Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Japanese airplanes bombed this city again tonight.

Nine big, three-engined bombers, escorted by small, fast fighting ships, appeared over the city at 7:30 p. m. and began dropping bombs systematically, apparently in a new attempt to destroy the Central government's airdrome.

It was the fifth attack in a fortnight.

Chinese anti-aircraft batteries let loose with continuous salvos and Chinese fighting planes took the air in an effort to engage the invaders.

Most of the Japanese bombs were falling near the airdrome, where Generalissimo Chiang's personal plane, piloted by Julius Barr, an American, is housed along with scores of military machines.

Americans watched the fighting from the roofs of the United States Embassy office buildings.

More than 250,000 persons of the city's normal population of 800,000 sought bomb-proof shelters.

Meanwhile, apprehensive over the possible spread of hostilities northward, the American embassy at Nanking and the consulate at Shanghai tonight studied means of removing Americans from points in interior China.

The U. S. S. Parrott today convoyed a tender which took 112 American refugees, among them many men, to the liner President Pierce. A Japanese bombardment of Nantao and Pootung preceded the departure, with Chinese anti-aircraft batteries replying.

The President Lincoln, sailing for Manila via Hongkong Saturday, was expected to take at least 100 American refugees. The President Hoover, first vessel bound for the United States since hostilities began, was anticipating a capacity load when it sails for San Francisco a week from today.

The President McKinley, sailing next day for Seattle, also was expecting a full list of passengers.

Fear Isolation.

Peiping, Aug. 24 (AP).—Foreign residents of Peiping feared tonight that all contact with the outside world was about to be shut off except through Japanese sources and under Japanese surveillance.

British Cabinet Will Confer on Chinese Crisis

English Peace Hope Fades, Nanking Peace Move Feared Too Late.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 24.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, breaking his holiday in Scotland, will discuss the Far Eastern situation here tomorrow with cabinet members.

On the eve of the meeting, British hopes of accomplishing anything for Shanghai through a plan of neutralization virtually had flickered out.

The Chinese embassy released a statement from the Nanking central government conditionally accepting the plan, but informed sources said they feared the action had "come too late to be of any use."

The prime minister tomorrow will meet with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Viscount Halifax, lord president of the council.

Informed sources said Britain, if necessary, would use force to protect her nationals and push vigorously demands for full compensation for damage sustained by British interests.

The ministerial talks, it also was understood, were almost certain to take in the situation created in the Mediterranean by attacks by unidentified submarines and planes on merchantmen, a development of the Spanish Civil War.

The National Council of Labor tonight urged the government to cooperate with the United States through the nine-power treaty or with the League of Nations to compel withdrawal of Japanese troops.

In Hongkong, the British Middlesex regiment was ordered to be ready to move again on an hour's notice following its landing there from Singapore.

China, in her answer to the British plan to save Shanghai, agreed to withdraw her troops if Japan would do likewise. Japan's attitude thus far has been negative.

2 Army Airmen Killed in Crash

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 24 (AP).—Two Randolph Field fliers, an instructor and a cadet, were killed today when their plane crashed and burned 2½ miles north of Schertz.

The victims were Second Lieut. Robert C. Wood, of the Air Reserve, on active duty as an instructor, and Flying Cadet Frank Fisch.

Herndon Given PWA Fund for Water System

Mayor Informed of $30,600 Grant; Project Will Cost $68,000.

Mayor Russell A. Lynn, of Herndon, yesterday was notified by Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, that the Public Works Administration had approved a grant of $30,600 for establishment of a municipal water system in the town.

The total cost of the system will be $68,000 of which $37,400 is to be raised through the sale of town bonds, these bonds are repayable over a 30-year period bearing the 4 per cent interest rate. The project was started last spring coninicident with the municipal sewerage system, which is now nearing completion. The voters authorized at a special election, the issuance of town bonds to finance both projects conditioned on obtaining the Federal grant. Construction of the water system has been delayed pending receipt of the grant.

Under the plans of the town council the town will purchase the assets of the present Herndon water company. The council plans to erect a 50,000-gallon storage tank, enlarge existing water mains and make extensions into areas of the town now without water service.

A special meeting of the town council will be held to let the contract for construction of the new system immediately.

New Law Readmits Aliens Into Army

Aliens will be permitted to reenlist in the United States Army, under provisions of a law passed in the closing sessions of Congress, the War Department pointed out yesterday. The new law was made necessary. Army officials said, because of a provision contained in the War Department appropriation act of 1938 which barred the re-enlistment of 7,000 soldiers not United States citizens.

Many of the men affected, officials declared, were under the impression that their enlistment oath had made them citizens. Some of the alien enlisted men had served more than 25 years and under the 1938 army supply act would have been barred from completing 30 years service to become eligible for retirement.

The remedial legislation which has just become effective provides that alien enlisted men must agree to become United States citizens as "expeditiously" as possible. Original alien enlistments will not be accepted.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—The Tammany leadership, locked in a fight with pro-Roosevelt Democrats, promised today to stay regular if Senator Royal S. Copeland loses the nomination for mayor in the primary.

As he promised a united front against the Fusionist present Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia., Sullivan's associates set up Copeland headquarters in every borough.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP).—A Michigan clergyman, once a physician, told Buffalo's Interdenominational Bible Conference last night the average 16-year-old girl of today "knows more about sex than her grandmother did after she'd had her first baby."

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 24 (AP).—Freckle-faced young Jimmy McGuigan, a messenger boy, went to a fashionable beach-front hotel and knocked on an eighth floor door tonight.

Los Angeles, Aug. 24 (AP).—Police authorities assigned two homicide squad detectives today to report on the death of Jane Weir, 21, film actress, from Davenport, Iowa, who died unexpectedly Friday night after apparent recovery from an appendicitis operation.

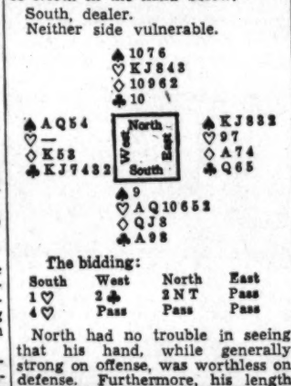
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Deceptive Bidding.

The expert takes great delight in catching the opponents "flat-footed." If he can confuse an opponent and induce a mistake in the bidding, it is often possible for him to prevent a corrective of that mistake. Note the deceptive bidding of North in the hand below.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ♣	2 N T	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

North had no trouble in seeing that his hand, while generally strong on offense, was worthless on defense. Furthermore, his length in hearts served to destroy the defensive value of his partner's high cards in hearts. Since he was not vulnerable against vulnerable opponents it seemed highly probable that he would have to sacrifice against an adverse game bid.

In the hope of forestalling such a bid, or perhaps of sacrificing at a low level, North made the free response of two no-trump. East should have bid three spades, disdaining even to double what he should have realized was a pure psychic. But East was caught off balance and passed before he had thought the situation over. At this point South made a very intelligent rebid; his partner's two no-trump bid sounded a little "fishy" because ordinarily North would be only too glad to double vulnerable opponents instead of bidding no-trump. If North's bid was a psychic he was sure to have good support for the hearts, and an immediate rebid of four hearts would be the best way of assisting North in his plan to keep the opponents out of the bidding. If North actually had a sound response of two no-trump, four hearts would be a sound contract at which to play the hand. When the bidding came around to East again, that worthy decided that his partner's overcall must have been a very shabby one. The show of strength by North and South intimidated him into passing the four heart contract. A little more faith in his vulnerable partner instead of in nonvulnerable opponents would have led him to a four spade bid, with a run out to five clubs indicated in the event that the opponents doubled too promptly.

In the play, South had no problems. He drew trumps, and lost one spade and two diamonds. North did not fail to point out that East and West had a sure slam in clubs and an almost sure slam in spades.

Lotus Dancers, Shoreham Dog Night Club Hits

Magda Scores in 'Slums of Paris;' Brinkley's Goes in for 'Posing.'

By Chanticleer

The Lotus steps forth this week with a lallapalooza of a floor show. Exhibit A elsewhere on this page shows Magda, one of the little items that helps add eye-appeal as well as artistry. Magda co-stars with Billy Branch in a contribution by that worthy's company, entitled "Slums of Paris." Very Parisian and all that sort of thing.

Lenora's Dancing Dolls open with a "kidding" number and a can-can with Muriel Baker and May Hannigan stepping out of the line for tap and waltz acrobatic numbers. Agnes Dwyer is featured in a swing tap and Marion Dawn and Al Norton represent the home forces in song and introductions.

Never a cover charge at this down-town spot, shows three times daily and Bill Strickland and his ork for your dancing.

* * * *

The Shoreham maintains that when a man stands on his head and a dog balances himself on his nose (it is not clear whether it's the dog's nose or the man's nose) it comes close to being news. In fact whether it's the dog's nose or the man's nose, we consider it news. Anyway, Tokawa is at hand with his educated canines, on the Terrace each evening. Also France and La-Pell in a novelty balancing and trapeze swinging act.

* * * *

Oscar is having troubles these days at the Ambassador's Hi Hat room. The citizenry swarm in each afternoon to escape the heat and for those swell tunes turned out by the Three Ms.

* * * *

"Posin'" has hit the Southeast spot, Brinkley's. The cooler weather is responsible for this dance innovation, which roughly is dancing until the participants decide to stop and "pose." The ork helps the dancers in posing by suddenly stopping.

* * *

"The Shaw band is a bunch of good guys, any one of whom would fit into any big-time band without a hitch." So says a booking agent from out of town when dining at the Madrillon where Johnnie and his boys swing forth nightly.

Pooh, its always fair weather at the Mayfair. Bring on the outside temperature—the Mayfair is always comfortable. Campbell, Lisee and Stull play for you afternoons and evenings.

* * *

Dick Richards is holding the same floor talent over for this week-end at Boulevard Farms. The folks really liked them. Might be a good time for you to initiate yourself to the deliciousness of the Farms' chicken dinners.

Dancing as usual, warm or cool, at Glen Echo's Spanish Garden ballroom, David McWilliams and his orchestra play nightly except Sundays and Kitty Simons sings.

* * *

Big gala attraction of the week: The finals in Wardman Park's talent Quest contest, with all the preliminary winners on hand to compete for the big prizes, an all-expense trip to New York. N. B. C. will broadcast the goings-on Thursday night and, as a matter of fact, the winner gets to see Radio City as a part of his award. On hand will be Gordon Barnes, Enid Mitchell, Bernard Slebos, Louis Pike, Amy Orent and Bob Mahoney, ranging from tap dancers to singers. Yessir, one will be the winner. Thursday night is the time. See you there.

Organizer to Describe Hospital Work in Spain

Edward G. Barsky, organizer and head of the American hospitals in Spain, will be the leading speaker at a meeting at 8:30 tonight in the Washington Hotel under auspices of the American Friends of Spanish Democracy. Other speakers will be Dr. Eduard Lindeman, of the New York School of Social Work, and Jay Allen, former correspondent of the Chicago Tribune in Spain.

A Hispano-American war film, "Heart of Spain," will be shown.

PWA Pays $32,190.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug 24.—The Waynesboro school district yesterday received $32,190 as the htird and final of a series of grant payments made by the Public Works Administration for construction of the new senior high school.

Little Girl From Paris

Magda, as can be seen in the picture above, contributes considerably to the floor show at the Lotus this week. She appears with Billy Branch and Company in a dance novelty, "Slums of Paris."

Louisiana Mission Offers Industries Tax Exemptions

Seventy-two members of the Louisiana Business Men's Association are in Washington on the last lap of an Eastern tour to boost their States as a tourist and industrial center.

They stressed the argument that Louisiana exempts new industries from taxation for ten years. Since the exemption was granted in June, 1936, industries worth more than $25,000,000 have opened in the State, J. E. Clayton, secretary of the association, said. These include a $10,000,000 addition to a Standard Oil plant, a $10,000,000 paper mill and various small establishments.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 24.

When I study my "Notes from the Normandie" I find myself concentrating on that old chestnut about how much people eat on the big ferry-boats. My recent voyage on the record-breaking crossing saw some marvelous scoffing feats performed—even by women who count their calories ashore.

ALICE HUGHES.

How they shovel in the caviar, which comes freely from the regular blue-plate special! Lawk, it must take a couple of tons of the succulent fish-eggs to see 2,000 people across the Atlantic — not to mention enough champagne to test Boulder Dam severely. And the bubbly, of course, is extra; and how those bar-tabs pile up by the end of a trip!

The big French flag-ship has become a great favorite with the traveling public of the luxury-liner school. And since I was making the trip with Lilly Dache, the milliner and a French belle, we had to go pretty social—lunching with Commandant Thoreux and the purser, and a dinner with the second officer. In the mad rush to get off, my best black evening dress was omitted, to my horror, but I pigged along somehow with a couple of red numbers. Several friends were aboard, from Hollywood and the home town, and one of the nicest men I met on the ship was Vladimir Golschmann, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony.

Strange about these boat trips. I've crossed the Atlantic about 20 times, hither and thither, and I'm still pretty much "lost at sea," literally. I never feel precisely myself afloat. The Atlantic, I guess, is not my beat. Then, too, I miss the old helpmate, who is always at his best on boats, and enjoys them enough for two or three. But it was a colorful trip, just the same.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT THE NORMANDIE—The Hollywood lassies aboard ship seemed to run largely to screen writers and scenarists' wives, most of whom I knew when they were battling the typewriter in New York for the proverbial peanuts. Lin Root, who used to work for Time Magazine and now gets important money for movie stories, was one of us, and so was Marian Johnson, wife of clever Nunnally, who has now become an associate producer, and so was Mrs. Sam Hellman, whose spouse writes those comical yarns. Among the men were Directors Rouben Mamoulian and King Vidor . . .

• • • •

Movie people always tend to huddle when away from their own stamping ground. They always seem to have a great deal to say to each other, usually about pictures and picture folk.

• • • •

The Hollywood contingent tell me that the best dressed woman out thar is Mrs. Lewis Milestone, wife of the director, and that she is really a style setter. Further, that Betty Wyman, probably the best known of our models, will not continue on the screen, but has developed a talent for clothes designing, and may keep on in that business on the Coast.

• • • •

On shipboard, I realized all over again that it is now virtually impossible to tell the size of a woman's bankroll by the clothes on her back—and front, too. There are at least two reasons for this. One is that wealthy people now tend to wear very simple raiment. Another is that good clothes may now be bought by many more people than used to be the case. If you can think of some more, drop me a card. Further, I am optimistic enough to believe that clothes-sense and good taste are on the upheat in most brackets; or am I too, too naive?

Care in Makeup Will Save Skin, Westmore Says

ACTRESSES have better complexions than 75 per cent of the girls who have never touched grease paint, in the opinion of Perc Westmore, Hollywood make-up expert. There are two definite reasons for this, he says. One is that the screen stars never fail to protect their faces with powder bases, and the other that they cleanse their skins thoroughly in an effort to get every vestige of grease paint off.

One of the first make-up lessons every actress learns, says Mr. Westmore, is to use a foundation before she applies rouge and powder to her face. This base protects her skin from the sun, from the wind and from the dust particles in the air. It also keeps the powder and rouge from coloring her pores, although these cosmetics in themselves are not in the last harmful to the skin. If a girl prefers cream rouge it should go on directly over the powder base. If she likes dry rouge it should be put on over the powder.

Mr. Westmore urges that make-up always be removed from the skin before retiring. Several applications of cleansing cream should be used before a soap and warm water scrubbing. The first time cleansing cream is applied the object is to soften the make-up and the cream should be gently rubbed over the face with short upward rotary strokes. After this is removed with cleansing tissue cream should be applied again and again until no soil shows up on the tissue. Then comes the soap and water cleansing with Westmore's advice that a good soap will not hurt the most sensitive skin. However, he argues against highly perfumed soaps because they have a tendency to dry out the skin.

Gloves Assume New Importance in the Fall Style Scene

Are Longer in Length to Meet the New Short Sleeves and Show Marked Tendency to Bright Color and Gay Ornamentation.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

GLOVES are more than just another accessory this fall, they are an integral part of the costume, because of the new vogue for short sleeves. With elbows and arms exposed, gloves are making up the deficiency by increasing in length. This applies to both novelty versions and the classic slip-on. The eight-button is the regulation length and it may be worn either softly crushed or sleek and straight; both interpretations are sponsored by current style trends.

There is a decided tendency toward colored gloves for fall. Subtle dark and bright tones which are a smart contrast with black. For instance, cinnamon brown, Araby green, wine, scone gray, marine blue, burnt beige. This bit of color contrast is then picked by hats or hat trimming, belts, shoes or bags. Tinted handwear usually comes in the dull leathers, such as suede and doeskin, with the shiny glace kid gloves fashioning the black, dark brown and navy blue. For women who prefer a monotone costume, there are black and dark shades of suede in both the eight-button slip-ons and the shorter novelty affairs.

While many of the newest gloves are ornamented with unique stitched patterns, odd-shaped cuffs and the like, the general theme is simplicity—unobtrusive smartness. Stitched designs may be of the all-over variety, or modernistic lines down the top of the glove. There is also much hand-stitching around the entire glove, even the inside of the fingers. Dressmaker touches, such as cording, embroidery, ruffling, fluting, are much in evidence on novelty handwear that flaunts cuffs or cuff-effects. Hit-and-miss stitching instead of the conventional method, as glove-top decoration, is popular and considered ultra-chic.

Dull and shiny leathers combine to fashion many of the smart fall gloves. For example, suede and glace kid or capeskin; in either the hald-and-half method or as contrasting trimming. One outstanding glove in this classification, used suede for the glove, with capeskin for wide band ornamentation and the little finger of each hand. Square-fingers are news in glove fashions for sports and spectator sports types; sometimes these are accented by wide hand-stitching and again, they are unadorned. To wear with long sleeves, there are both glace kid and suedes in shorter lengths, such as the four and six-button versions.

For formal evening, the 16-button length has returned to vogue, in white kid and black suede. For informal occasions, there are white, black and tinted gloves in in the popular eight-button length. To wear with tweeds and sports furs, pigskin is again to the fore, interpreted in many of the swank new stylings. Capeskin and mocha are also used extensively for handwear in this category.

The new short sleeve length as illustrated in the dress below has brought gloves into the fashion spotlight. The white glace kid gloves (at right) with hand stitched trimming are for wear with formal afternoon clothes. A sunburst design and streamlined effect on one side is a novel way of using the stitching in self color. The smartly tailored gloves of glace kid in the lower picture have suede trim attached by overcast stitching. Gloves designed by Paul Chanut. The "portmanteau" case is for cigarettes and cosmetics.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'Alone and Completely Lost' Since Husband's Death a Year Ago, Widow Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About a year ago I lost my husband, who was my whole life. Since then I have been so badly broken up that I don't know which way to turn or what to do. I can't seem to get hold of myself, though I have tried bravely. I do office work and have been a stenographer-typist for over 13 years. I was employed by the NRA for three years but since then have had no steady work. Although I am hoping to get a permanent job with the Government eventually, I have lost interest in office work and everything in general.

• • • •

I would like to do something different from office work. I feel the change might be beneficial. I like social service work but one has to have a college degree to do that sort of thing. I have no children, unfortunately, and am all alone and completely lost. I have no relatives and very few friends and have no one to turn to, or even to talk with. I never mention my grief or sorrow to anyone but sometimes I get so discouraged that I think I can't go on. Can you suggest anything that would help me? Very truly yours, BROKEN.

• • • •

DEAR BROKEN: If you have time on your hands and think social service work might give you a real interest in life and help you get a grip on yourself, why not offer your services to the Volunteer Bureau of the Council of Social Agencies? There is a great deal of clerical and statistical work, typing, stenography, etc., which can be done of evenings, or you might arrange to do group work with children of afternoons or on your days off. Call Miss Hibbard, director of the Volunteer Bureau, and make an appointment to discuss the proposition. The telephone number is MEtropolitan 2284, and her headquarters are at 918 M street northwest, Apartment 23. She is there all day on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

• • • •

Since you have no one to whom you can unburden your heavy heart, why not contact the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone ADams 1033. Either the director, Miss Beulah Smith, who is a psychiatric social worker, or Dr. Elmer Klein, the psychiatrist, would be willing to help you get your emotions under control and work out a purposeful, integrated way of life for the future. Wholesome activities and interests no doubt will be suggested. It would probably be a good thing to see a diagnostician. No doubt your health has suffered as a result of your prolonged immersion in hopeless grief. Proper medication might restore appetite, enable you to sleep and automatically give you back a sense of well-being which would go far toward correcting your melancholy. M. H.

Inherits Old Books.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In a legacy which I recently acquired there are a number of old books of many types. Many are of the pre-Civil War period and some are first, second and third editions. Some are works of fiction, and others are historical and religious. I should like to know their value and my mother suggests that I ask you to give me information as to how I could acquire this knowledge. I do not care to have solicitors call to see them but should like catalogues or other information. Sincerely yours,

T. K. M.

• • • •

DEAR T. K. M.: Mr. Valta Parma, who is in charge of the rare book collection at the Congressional Library is, in my opinion, the person best qualified to give you the information you want. If you will mail to him a list of the books you have inherited, stating the title, the author, the name of the publisher and the date of printing of each, he will tell you what each is probably worth. Mr. Parma says the appraisal can be handled by correspondence, since it takes a little time to check on such matters. If he thinks the books have unusual value; or if he is in doubt about any of them, he may prefer to see them. In any event, Mr. Parma is your man. M. H.

Must Write Term Paper.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Would you be able to furnish me any information concerning problems a girl might encounter when living in boarding homes? The problems should concern any difficulties she might have with neighbors, locality, etc.; anything that might necessitate her moving or coming to some agreement. I have been assigned to write a term paper on this subject, and how such problems are handled. The United States Department of Labor has suggested that you may be able to help me. Any suggestions will be greatly appreciated. Yours very truly,

M. K. C.

• • • •

DEAR M. K. C.: In my opinion, your best source of information on this subject would be the Room Registery secretaries of the local Y. W. C. A., at Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Either write to, or contact personally, Miss Florence Hillengas or Mrs. Eldred Dickinson, the two secretaries in charge of placing girls in boarding homes. Both know, from long experience and training, what situations and problems face the girl who lives in a boarding home, and how she should cope with them for best results. M. H.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A Stutterer Theory.

Dr. James A. Greene, who has had such a wide experience in treating such cases at the National Hospital for Speech Disorders, in New York, believes that stutterers have a kind of personality type. The stutter type of person may not develop into a stutterer, but he has a better chance than others.

One feature of the stutter type that has attracted a great deal of attention is the theory of cerebral dominance. Or, in other words, whether a person is dominantly right or left handed. It is, however, not only right and left handedness that is involved, but right and left eyedness, hearing dominance and foot and leg dominance.

So far as speech is concerned, it is known that in the majority of people the centers for speech are in the left half of the brain. And these people are naturally right handed. The motor fibers for control of the muscles of the arms and legs cross over from the brain centers to the opposite side of the body, so the dominant muscle cells for the right side of the body in these right-handed people are in the left half of the brain, too.

In left-handed persons presumably this is all changed—the speech centers are in the right half of the brain. And the supposition has been that to try to teach these people right-handedness destroys the cerebral balance, with consequent functional disturbance in the play of muscles and speech centers with the result—stuttering.

Dr. Greene is not fully convinced of the truth of this theory. He admits that most stutterers are left handed, but says that many nervous people representing behavior disorders, squint, neuroses and other conditions are left handed. He says that his study of the evidence leads him to believe that stuttering may not be related to left-handedness or manual reversal.

He does feel that the stuttering type of child has a peculiar nervous organization, on top of which is early conditioning in the family.

Interesting Recipes for Canning Are Received in Post Contest

Virginia Woman Given First Prize for Formula for Pear and Quince Preserves; Other Awards Are Announced.

By Rebekah Blake.

MANY INTERESTING methods for canning were disclosed in The Post recipe contest for last week. There were new and old-fashioned ways for using the season's abundant fruits for pickles, jellies, conserves, preserves, jams and chutneys.

The first prize of $3 went to Miss Lucille Purson, Herndon, Va., for her recipe of "Pear and Quince Preserves." Second prize, $2, was awarded to Mrs. James E. Birchell, Arlington, Va., for her recipe of "Peach Apple and Carrot Conserve."

Miss Louise C. Yeager, Staunton, Va., was given the third prize of $1 for her recipe on "Watermelon Preserves."

To Mrs. J. W. Ireland, 719 Third street northeast, Washington, went the fourth prize of $1 for her recipe, "Spiced Blueberry Jam."

The fifth prize, $1, was awarded to Miss Julia Minor, 3039 Morrison street northwest, Washington, D. C., for her "Chutney" recipe.

Miss Purson's recipe:

Pear and Quince Preserves.

6 pounds of pears
3 lemons
3 pounds of quinces
6 pounds of sugar

Pare and core the fruit and squeeze over it the lemon juice to keep it from turning dark, stew the cores and parings in water to cover until they are soft. Strain, slice fruit and add to the water, increasing quantity and cook until the fruit is soft. Mash the fruit until smooth, then add sugar and grated yellow rind of the lemons. Cook an hour longer, stirring to keep it from burning. Test occasionally until jelly stage is reached. Seal when cold.

Mrs. Birchell's recipe:

Peach Apple and Carrot Conserve.

2 cups sliced peaches
1 quart diced tart apples
1 quart carrots finely diced
6 cups sugar
Juice two lemons

Mix ingredients and simmer until mixture is clear, stir to prevent burning. Pack hot in sterilized jars and seal at once.

Miss Yeager's recipe:

Watermelon Preserves.

Trim peeling and remove all red meat from rind of watermelon. Grate rind on coarse grater and cook in its own juice until tender. When done pour off all juice. Add 1 large can of crushed pineapple and an equal amount of sugar pound for pound and cook 20 minutes.

Mrs. Ireland's recipe:

Spiced Blueberry Jam.

2 pounds fully ripe blueberries
½ teaspoon cinnamon
7 cups sugar
Juice of 1 lemon
¼ teaspoon cloves
1 cup liquid fruit pectin

Crush the blueberries, add the lemon juice, cinnamon, cloves and sugar and bring to a full, rolling boil, stirring constantly. Boil 2 minutes, then remove the heat and add the liquid pectin, stirring constantly. Skim and pour into glasses. Cover with melted paraffin. This will make about twelve 6-ounce glasses.

Miss Minor recipe:

Chutney.

8 grown cooking apples
5 cloves garlic
1 pound raisins
2½ pounds preserved ginger
3 cups light brown sugar
2½ ounces salt
¼ teaspoon cayenne
Vinegar

Peel and core apples. Cut into small cubes. Chop garlic fine and add to apples. Remove the stones from dates and chop fine—also chop raisins fine and add seasoning. Cover with vinegar. Cook until apples are tender. Seal in sterilized jars.

Hawaii Study By Congress Allows Tours

Wives and Families Will Accompany 24 Senators, Representatives.

Many Functions, Army and Navy Maneuvers Are Arranged.

A distinguished group from Congress has booked passage to the Hawaiian Islands this fall, when they will study subjects relating to the welfare of the islands. Twelve Senators and twelve Representatives will sail September 30 from San Francisco and from Los Angeles on October 1.

With their wives and families, the 24 will embark on the Matson liner Malaolo, arriving in Honolulu October 6. Industrial and agricultural development of the principal islands of the Hawaiian group will be witnessed firsthand, and there will be special Army and Navy maneuvers at Schofield Barracks, Pearl Harbor and other stations of the national defense forces in this mid-Pacific area.

Numerous unofficial groups of Congressmen have visited Hawaii in recent years, but the last official visit was in 1900, two years after Hawaii became annexed to the United States as a Territory. That visit was for the purpose of drafting the organic act.

Their visit will be a short one, as members of the party will embark October 23 aboard the Matson liner Lurline and arrive in San Francisco October 28. Samuel Wilder King, Hawaii's delegate to Congress, will be an important member of the official group.

A similar jaunt was made two years ago when a Congressional party made a trip to the Philippines to witness the inauguration of President Manuel Quezon. The party, of which Vice President Garner was a member, continued around the world and had such a good time that the members frequently meet for reunions in Washington.

The following Senators have been appointed by Vice President Garner to serve on the committee, and with their wives and families will make the trip:

Senator William H. King, of Utah, and Mrs. King and their daughter, Kathleen King; Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, and Mrs. Tydings; Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, and his son, Ben; Senator Homer T. Bone, of Washington, and Mrs. Bone; Senator Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont, and his son, William; Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, Mrs. Burke, and their daughters, the Misses Beatrice and Barbara Burke; Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California, and Mrs. McAdoo; Senator Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa, and Mrs. Gillette; Senator Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan, and Mrs. Brown; Senator Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, and Mrs. Lundeen, and Senator Bennett Clark, of Misssouri, and Mrs. Clark.

Representatives on the House Committee appointed by Speaker Bankhead are:

Representative Carl Vinson, of Georgia; Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, Mrs. Snell and their daughter, Miss Sara Louise Snell; Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas, and his niece, Miss Billie Bob Jones; Representative John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, Mrs. Rankin and their daughter, Miss Annie Laurie Rankin; Representative John H. Kerr, of North Carolina, and Mrs. Kerr; Representative Lex Green, of Florida, and Mrs. Green; Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts; Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, and Mrs. Hope; Representative Claude V. Parsons, of Illinois; Representative Eugene B. Crowe, Mrs. Crowe, of Indiana, and their son, Barney G. Crowe; Representative John J. Dempsey, of New Mexico, and Mrs. Dempsey, and Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, and Mrs. Nichols.

ABOUT THE TOWN

With Dudley Harmon.

There's a story behind the fact that Lieut. John Bolton expects to leave early next month for the West Coast, where he will help with details on a new film tentatively titled "Submarine."

It's a wise movie director who, planning one of those "boy-meets-girl" on a battleship or at Annapolis extravaganzas, first consults with the United States Navy Department. They will lend him an officer who, in unofficial capacity, will advise on technical details.

If there is no such authority lurking somewhere in the background, movie producers are apt to make such little mistakes as showing a sailor slapping an admiral on the back, or a couple of girls sitting in a classroom at the Naval Academy. Believe it or not, one movie mogul actually thought Annapolis was a co-educational organization.

Also, the Navy likes to have one of its crowd on the sidelines as such a film is being made to protect its own interests. Its own special Board of Review passes on all scripts before they are put into production, and before a film is released it must be submitted to the Secretary of the Navy.

Experts assigned to such movies by the Navy do this work in an unofficial capacity while on leave from their regular posts.

Lieut. Bolton is a member of the public relations staff at the department at the present moment. On his return from the West Coast he will be joined by Mrs. Bolton, who is at Newport.

"Guess who I ran into the other day! Ramon Padilla. I only talked to him for a few minutes, as he was frightfully rushed at Franco's office here, where we went to see about Didda's permission to enter the rebels' part of Spain."

Washington friends of Ramon Padilla, former Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, will be interested in this extract from a letter from Mary Cowles, written from St. Jean de Luz on the Franco-Spanish border. Padilla has been reported at various times seriously wounded, and even killed. His father was Ambassador here until the fall of Alfonso, and, with his family, is now at their summer home in San Sebastian. They were obliged to flee to Paris during the great battle there, but returned after the rebels captured the city.

Mary has by this time returned to Paris and from there will hop to Switzerland to see Fernanda de Morenschildt, daughter of Mrs. Francis Taylor and granddaughter of Senator McAdoo. She will sail August 30 for Baltimore, and will immediately have plans under way for her wedding here October 16 to Willard Reed.

Her sister, Virginia Cowles, well-known young writer, is the "Didda" of the letter. She has been with the loyalists in Spain as a journalist, and now hopes to be able to send back articles from Franco's side. She and Mary had planned to go to Russia, but permission to enter was refused them.

For several weeks they visited the British Ambassador to Spain and Lady Chilton, at Hendaye, where the Embassy was moved after the outbreak of the revolution.

Louise F. Bruce Becomes Bride Of Naval Man

Daughter of Captain Wed to Lieut. Sunderland in Academy Chapel.

August is still giving June a run for its weddings. Yesterday at a colorful Annapolis ceremony, Miss Louise Frances Bruce, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Bryson Bruce, U. S. N., became the bride of Lieut. Morton Sunderland (JG), U. S. N., son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. A. H. Sunderland, U. S. A.

At 5 o'clock, the bride, wearing her mother's wedding dress of satin, with neck and sleeves of rosepoint lace, touched with seed pearls, came up the aisle in the historic Naval Academy Chapel on the arm of her father. Her bouquet carried out the traditional white motif with lilies of the valley and gladioli.

Her sister, Miss Betty D. Bruce, who served as her maid of honor, followed her in a dress of rose taffeta, trimmed with rose velvet. Her off-the-face hat was of brown maline and her flowers blue delphinium and signet roses.

Lieut. (JG) E. J. O'Donnell was best man, and the ushers in their smart uniforms were Lieuts. (JG) John B. Cragg, C. R. Hermis, J. A. E. Hindman, H. H. Marable, Charles B. Martell and Bruce McCoy.

Chaplain William N. Thomas officiated at the ceremony which took place before the chapel chancel banked with palms, ferns, lilies and clusters of gypsophila.

A small reception followed at the home of the bride.

Among the out-of-town guests were Commander and Mrs. C. L. Brand, of Philadelphia; Col. and Mrs. G. W. Cochen, of Washington; Miss Marie Sullivan, of Plainfield, N. J.; Miss Jane Sunderland, the bridegroom's sister, of Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Downs, of Detroit, Mich.

Due to service orders, which when they come, come like the wind, time did not allow for formal invitations to be issued to the wedding.

Lieut. and Mrs. Morton Sunderland will make their home on the French Riviera.

Sewing Club Lends Hand To Hospital

Auxiliary Makes 4,000 Atricles in 4 Years for Children.

Group Also Sends Fruit to Sick Firemen, Aids Needy Families.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Four thousand articles—everything from babies' bibs to window curtains—have been made for Children's Hospital in the last four years by the Sewing Club of the D. C. Fire Department Ladies Auxiliary. The club, which adjourned for the summer, will resume meetings in September.

The ladies auxiliary was formed August 12, 1927, at the home of Mrs. Anthony Mayhew, still an active member. The women, —wives, sisters and mothers of firemen of the District—met to plan a reception for the visiting firemen and their families who would be here for the Labor Day Parade.

If you have been a resident of the District for some years, you will remember those Labor Day events, said to have been second only to Inaugural parades in size. The ladies auxiliary, from the time it was organized, participated, entering floats which were awarded prizes year after year, sometimes several trophies in the same season. It also prepared lunches for visiting firemen and their families.

The auxiliary members would work part of Saturday and all day Sunday preceding Labor Day, packing two sandwiches and a generous slice of cake in each box. Funds at first were provided by the women's organization and later were contributed by other groups and business houses as the number of visitors increased each year. From 15,000 to 20,000 lunches were distributed the year before the parades were discontinued.

The auxiliary was formed primarily to carry on benevolent work and four years ago, while Mrs Robert Hayes was president, the sewing club was organized. An average of 20 members gather the first and third Thursdays of each month, from September to June, and sew at the hospital, making articles for which there is need.

Goody Cupboard Is Maintained.

In addition to this, the members send fruit and flowers to sick or injured firemen and provide baskets for some of Washington's needy families at the Christmas season.

The auxiliary's plan of providing contributions for the baskets is a simple one, which is a reminder of Christmas all through the year. It is a "goody cupboard." When members come to the social meetings, held monthly in addition to business meetings, which are on the second and fourth Mondays, they bring canned goods, jams and jellies for the cupboard. The idea was adopted during Mrs. Joseph H. Davidson's presidency, and Mrs. Frank Berry is now the chairman of the activity. The cupboard, by the way, is always at the home of the chairman of this department, and the auxiliary meets there two days before Christmas to pack the baskets for distribution. As Christmas nears, the contributions are often vegetables and staple groceries, which could not be kept through the earlier months, but which are essential to stock the pantries of needy families, to whom the auxiliary plays Santa Claus. Last year, in one family for which it provided, there were 13 children

This spring, Mrs. John Gallota gave a luncheon at her home on Irving street for members of the auxiliary and their friends. She had originally intended it only as a social affair but the members decided to make the occasion a benefit for charity and contributed a fund which was turned over to Mrs. Harry Bell, vice president and chairman of ways and means, to be given to Bald Eagle Camp.

Anniversary Party To Be in October.

The organization will celebrate its anniversary in October rather than on its actual birthday month, with a large party at Joppa Lodge Hall. There is always a program and a supper at which a huge birthday cake is a feature.

So successful have been the activities of the District auxiliary that it has been asked to help organize two for nearby departments—one at Cabin John and another at Alexandria.

Mrs. Thomas Baber is president of the auxiliary this year; Mrs. Bell, vice president; Mrs. A. J. Lipske junior, vice president and membership chairman; Mrs. Charles Weitzel, secretary; Mrs. Margaret Ratcliffe, treasurer; Mrs. W. H. Cameron, chaplain; Mrs. James Chrisman, guard, and Mrs. Gallota, color bearer.

Mrs Harmon Chapman is chairman of the social committee; Mrs. Logan Woolard, of the sewing club, and Mrs. Ernest Howard of publicity.

Presidents since Mrs. Mayhew have been Mrs. Helen Schultz, Mrs. John Virnstein, Mrs. Weitzel, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Chester Moffitt and Mrs. Howard.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

RUTH ROBINSON, immediate past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Washington, is looking forward not only to a vacation next month but—Dame Rumor says—has set October for her wedding. Her engagement to Dr. Arno L. Roach, of Kansas City, was announced some weeks ago and the marriage date tentatively set for the early fall, but just when, Ruth's friends have all been guessing. Just where is another unanswered question, but those who know her best think perhaps neither the date nor the place are so very far away.

She has been planning to take her vacation ever since June, she says, but hasn't managed to arrange it until now. She isn't taking a long trip, just little jaunts out of Washington and back again —maybe to New York to do a bit of shopping for her trousseau.

Miss Lela Carson, of Des Moines, Iowa, has come to succeed her as secretary to Dr. Raphael H. Miller, minister of the National City Christian Church. Miss Carson, a graduate of Drake University and a Theta, has been secretary to the pastor of University Place Church in Des Moines for the last three years.

But to return to the B. and P. W. Club's past president, she figured in a group of attractive club members photographed on the beach in Atlantic City during the recent national convention. The picture appears in the current issue of "Independent Woman," official publication of the federation, and is the only "bathing beauty" snap which survived the national conclave.

MRS. HOWARD C. BOONE, national president of the America War Mothers, arrived in New York Friday, aboard the President Roosevelt on her return from France. She went abroad last month as one of the delegates appointed to attend the dedication of American War Memorials erected by the United States Government in France and Belgium.

She will return to the Capital in a few days to make final plans for the national convention of her organization which is to be held in Detroit, September 28 to October 2. She stopped in Detroit on her way back to Washington from a visit at her former home in Kansas City, Mo., to confer with the convention committee only a short time before she left for abroad. It was during her visit in the Middle West in the early summer that she received notification of her appointment as one of the delegates to the overseas ceremonies.

She attended the reception given by the City of Paris for the distinguished guests and delegates to the dedication, which was held at the Hotel de Ville on July 31. Gen. Pershing who, with President LeBrun and other notables addressed the throng attending the opening ceremony at the dedication of the tall shaft at Montfaucon, mentioned Mrs. Boone in his address.

The War Mothers' president will return in a few days to the national headquarters at 1427 New Hampshire avenue, where she resides.

Among other Washingtonians who expect to attend the national convention in Detroit are Mrs. Amelia Thiele, state president of the District of Columbia; Mrs. Florence A. Latham, national corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mary T. Shannan, national custodian of records; Mrs. Elizabeth Roddy and Mrs. Walter Sriswell, president and delegate of the District of Columbia Chapter; Mrs. Sophie Pearce, president of the Admiral Coontz Chapter and Mrs. May Watts, president of the Bicentennial Chapter.

The first meeting of the fall season for the District of Columbia Chapter will be on Friday, September 10.

Mrs. William S. Spencer Leading Red Cross Aide

Began Volunteer Service at Outbreak of Spanish-American War; Is in Charge of District Chapter's Canteen Service.

Mrs. William S. Spencer, whose name is as associated with the District Chapter of the American Red Cross as is that of Miss Mabel Boardman with the national organization, has taken no vacation this season from her work as chairman of the Canteen Service Volunteers. As has been her custom for years, she is daily at the chapter headquarters from 11 o'clock to 3 excepting Saturdays, and is always available night or day, in case an emergency call should come.

Her Red Cross service began during the Spanish-American War when she worked with Clara Barton. She came forward again during the World War and has been active as head of the volunteers in the canteen since.

Gratitude has followed her service from the beginning. One of her most cherished possessions is a gold medal, the gift of Corporal George H. Reinhard, who became seriously ill here during the Spanish-American War. The inscription reads: "In gratitude for motherly kindness to one far from home and through whose efforts his life was saved."

Mrs. Spencer sent for his wife and mother and saw that he was provided with all the necessities for his trip home. He recovered and returned to Washington as soon as he was able to express his thanks. She later received the gold medal which, at his request, was presented to her at the closing meeting of the Grand Army Convention then in session in the Capital.

Secured Corcoran For Reception.

She had charge of arranging for the entertainment of the convention delegates, as social chairman, but had no idea she was to be honored at the reception she had planned. She had despaired of finding a suitable place for the function and had appealed to Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, then the First Lady, for a suggestion as to whree it could be held. Mrs. Roosevelt called in Brig. Gen. Charles McCauley, who arranged for the use of the Corcoran Art Gallery, which had just been completed but had not yet been filled with pictures.

She was so overcome by the soldiers' tribute and the public acknowledgment of her work, she was obliged to spend a day in bed recovering.

The first recreation room opened here for the men in the Spanish-American War was at the W. C. T. U. headquarters, 918 F street. Mrs. Spencer's father, who was a Civil War veteran, suggested she go down and help. She did so, as did countless other Washington women of that day. They served meals. Society women abandoned the social round to cook for the soldiers. Sometimes they did not know where funds were to come from for the food and materials they needed, but there were always friends who responded to appeals.

Mrs. Spencer had a request from one of the barracks for fruit. She asked it of various merchants who agreed willingly to contribute. Then there was the problem of gathering it. This the District police did for her. Years later, a man came into the Red Cross and recalled it. He was Sergt. Frank Thomas, who had told her the men wanted fruit. A few days later, he was informed the police wanted him outside the barracks. Puzzled and not a little disturbed, he went out to find they had come bearing gifts—the fruit Mrs. Spencer had secured.

The D. A. R. National Headquarters was then at the Washington Loan & Trust, on the seventh floor, and the women worked there as well. This was the time when pajamas first made their appearance, she recalls; for they were provided for the convalescent patients in the military hospitals.

Directed Canteen Here in Late War.

In the World War, the W. C. T. U. was again the first organization to open recreation rooms for the men, and again Mrs. Spencer assisted. Then the Red Cross, with which she had been affiliated since the Spanish-American War days, opened a recreation center at 1418 Pennsylvania avenue. She was put in charge and organized it with a recreation room on one floor and sleeping quarters on another which were available to the men at a nominal fee.

Mrs. Margaret Robbins was one of the women who came to Washington to go into war work at that time and Mrs. Spencer met her at the station when she arrived and assigned her to work at the canteen. Thus began their friendship and they are still working together for the Red Cross—Mrs. Robbins on the staff and Mrs. Spencer as a volunteer.

In the meantime Mrs. Robbins served overseas with the Home Communication Service for 13 months and later returned here to National Red Cross headquarters, then to serve for a time at Walter Reed Hospital and, for a year, at the State Department before joining the professional staff of the District Chapter.

The canteen during the World War was known for its hot cakes. Mrs. Spencer used to mix the dough and let the men make their own cakes. Mrs. Robbins incidentally, was the pianist and played for the singing and informal entertainments which were arranged. There were many other helpers who assisted in various ways.

Mrs. Spencer's work now is not heavy unless an emergency arises such as the flood in the spring when provisions were sent to the workers from the chapter house kitchen and blankets and clothing promptly assembled for refugees. At the time the bonus army marched on Washington the canteen service was called upon for aid. Volunteers are always on call. Some are housewives and many are women employed in the national and district headquarters. In any period of emergency or disaster in or near the Capital, Mrs. Spencer and her aides comprise the group to see that those in need are fed.

Picnic Is Given By Y. W. C. A.'s Business Group

The business and professional women's department of the Y. W. C A. last night sponsored a picnic supper and dance at Palisades Fieldhouse. The picnic, in deference to the cool and damp weather, was moved inside, but was enjoyed as much as if it had been out of doors, as originally planned.

The dance included a floor show provided by talented members of the business girls' group and their friends. There were accordion solos by Tommy Kidd, soprano solos by Miss Margaret Mowbray, monologues by Miss Jean Otterback, and a specialty dance by Miss Frances Bodenheimer. One of the amusing features of the entertainment was an act by a group of four lightning change artists, the Misses Jean Otterback Jean Carr, Janet Sweadner and Dorothy Sweadner.

Arrangements for the party were under the direction of Miss Mary Putnam, who has been in charge of the summer activities of the department, assisted by a committee including Miss Jessie Smith, department chairman; Miss Virginia Guthrie, Miss Margaret Hibble, Miss Ann Paul and Miss Alberta Mahone.

There were about 20 members of the Y. M. C. A. who attended as guests, including George Stafford, of the "Y" staff.

Mike Jacobs Fears Louis-Farr Title Fight Will Be Financial Flop

NATS COME FROM BEHIND TO BEAT BROWNS, 9 TO 6

Rain Keeps Fans Away From Office

Ticket Sales 'on Ropes;' 'Ringworms' Show Little Interest.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Aug. 24.—Unless this week's fistic clouds suddenly reveal a silver lining, Mike Jacobs may have just as tough a time getting his latest heavyweight promotion out of the red or, in the vernacular, "off the nut," as Tommy Farr is likely to have in lasting more than six rounds against Champion Joe Louis this Thursday night in the Yankee Stadium.

Three straight days of rain have had the box office business on the ropes. It wasn't very good to start with, due apparently to lack of enthusiasm for the Welshman's chances against the Negro and a conviction that $23, the top price, is a bit high nowadays to see another Louis knockout routine.

Jacobs, by no means ready to concede financial defeat, predicted that "one good day of sunshine" would put the ticket sale "over the top." The promotor estimated $190,000 was already in hand. He said approximately $230,000 would enable him to break even. At that figure, the gross "gate" would be only about a third of what Louis helped draw in Chicago last June, when he won the title from James J. Braddock.

The promoter may get the weather and ticket breaks he's hoping for. Clearing weather is predicted for tomorrow, with something like balmy temperatures again by Thursday. The fact remains, however, that the double-header tomorrow at the Polo grounds between the Giants and Cubs probably will draw twice as many cash customers, even though not as much cash, as the Farr-Louis fight the following night on the opposite bank of the Harlem River.

Most of the eleventh-hour fight trade is likely to be of the $1.50 variety. Fifteen thousand bleacher seats, at that price—a new minimum for any world heavyweight title bout—will go on sale at the stadium Thursday. If there's a total of 30,000 fans in the big Yankee ball park for the fight it will mean there's been a belated rush for the turnstiles.

Odds favoring Louis to win by a knockout were 5 to 1 today. Jack Doyle, the Broadway commissioner, said: "There have only been a few nibbles, at any price."

Among fight writers the feeling was that Farr, on the basis of his record or anything he has shown in training camp, stands no more than an outside chance to extend the champion.

An Associated Press poll of the experts today developed a consensus that Louis will win by a knockout in the sixth round. Most selections ranged from three to eight rounds as the limit for the British title challenger. Only two observers among those queried suggested the bout would go beyond ten rounds.

3d Straight Shoot Crown To Mrs. Hall

Vandalia's Show Stolen by Matron; 275 in Row for Miller.

By the Associated Press.

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 24.—Phil Miller, 44-year-old gun club operator of French Lick, Ind., broke 275 clays in a row today to capture the North American target championship—but the day's story of the thirty-eight grand American program belongs to Mrs. Lela Hall, 30-year-old, 120-pound sharpshooter from Strasburg, Mo.

Mrs. Hall cracked 194 of 200 targets to win the women's North American 16-yard crown for the third time, the first time in history the feat has been accomplished.

Two years ago "Lela," as shooters in the country know her, broke 191 to win the laurels, and then came back last year to win again with 196, four more than any other woman ever broke in the championship. Two years ago she broke 97 of 100 in the Grand American Handicap, top even in the clay target sport, to finish third—the peak performance for all the women who have taken part in that historic fray.

In competition with the best men shooters in 1935, she won the class A championship of the country here, defeating seven men in a 50-target shoot-off.

Today she had a two-target edge on Mrs. W. F. Stanton, of Oklahoma City, Okla., who finished with 192, while Mrs. Marie K. Grant, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, was third with 190.

Contrasted with Mrs. Hall's sterling performance was the poor showing of Joe Hiestand, of Hillsboro, Ohio, who had held the men's title the last two years, and who led the Nation's high-average gunners this year.

Hiestand, off form for more than a week, broke but 192 of 200 today, getting 96 of each 100. Last year he won the over-all championship, including 600 targets at 16 yards, 100 doubles and 200 handicap targets, with 881 of 900.

Miller, after breaking 200 in a row in the men's race, was forced to break 75 more without a miss to take the title, as two other top-notchers tied him in the regular event. W. Winteringham, of Barrington, Ill., and R. C. Coffey, of Orlando, Fla., also cracked 200, but Winteringham went out as he missed the twelfth target in the shoot-off.

It was his first miss in 425 targets this week, but it shoved him down to third place. Coffey broke his first 50 to stay in the running, but missed the seventy-second while Miller went on to take the title.

Redskins Begin Grinding Tomahawks for Pro Grid Campaign

Greeted by typical football atmosphere, the Washington Redskins, who represented Boston in the National Football League, opened training yesterday at Fairlawn Park, Anacostia, one-time home of the Nacotchant tribe, and the boys didn't waste any time getting into the swing of things. In the upper photos (left), three members kick together to get the kinks out of their systems. Roger Kelly Shoots 142; Wins Medal

Billows and Doering Tie for 2d in National Amateur Golf.

By the Associated Press.

Portland, Oreg., Aug. 24.—Roger Kelly, little but mighty golfer from Los Angeles, blasted par and the opposition today with a great closing round of 70 to post a 36-hole total of 142 and capture medal honors for the forty-first National Amateur championship.

One of the finest rounds carded for the two-day qualifying test on the Alderwood Country Club course saw the California State amateur champion lead a formidable field to the finish.

He ended up in spectacular fashion, plunking a 20-foot uphill putt into the cup for a birdie 4 on the 561-yard eighteenth. On the hole before he winged another birdie, ramming home a 9-foot putt for the 3.

Winner of his State's crown last week by the tournament record-breaking margin of 12 and 10, Kelly continued the sub-par pace he set at that time when he completed 133 holes in three shots under standard figures.

Trouble crept into the Loyola University law student's golf bag on three holes, but he came back with brilliant efforts on others to more than make up for the errors.

His first tee shot landed in a trap and he knocked a ball out of bounds on the fourth. The first hole cost him a stroke, and a final six. His two over par 7 on the 510-yard fourth put him 3 over par, but he finished with a 36, 1 under perfect figures for the first nine at Alderwood.

Billy Shea, Washington's representative, was safely in the qualifying fold by two strokes, with a total of 152, adding a 75 to his previous score of 78. Other Middle Atlantic qualifiers did not fare so well, although Jack Fulton shot a 72, but his score of yesterday was several strokes ovr the limit. Harry Parr 3d was out with 170.

Charles Pettijohn, Georgetown University, was in with 153, tying Shea's score, but another Hoya star, Johnny Burke, was out with 160

A gopher was the show stealer here today.

Reynolds Smith, the curly-haired Texan, caused the disturbance that resulted in tying up play for 20 minutes while a decision comparable to a Supreme Court masterpiece was in the hands of the U. S. G. A. officials. After an outgoing 34, Smith was on his way to a par-cracking score on the back nine when his tee shot settled in a depression that could have been made by a small animal.

An official ruling was necessary and a decision was rendered that an animal had made the hole and under a local rule the ball could be dropped without penalty. It rolled in the sand when dropped. Reynolds played it out, was short of the green in his next and finally holed out in seven.

Frank Strafaci, the Brooklyn former national public links champion, was an early pacesetter with a 145 total, tacking a 74 today to yesterday's score of 71 that led the field.

A quartet of stars in the favorites bracket, were grossed at 149, well in the qualifying figure that may be as low as 153, including Scotty Campbell, Fred Haas, Robert Thompson, and Paul Leslie.

Johnny Murphy Victim of 2-Run Spree in Final Inning.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Tony Piet's second hit of the afternoon, a double to left center off Relief Pither Johnny Murphy with two out in the last half of the ninth, drove home Luke Appling with the run that gave the White Sox a 9-8 victory over the league-leading New York Yankees in the first game of their series today.

A crowd of 20,000 saw the Sox, with Mule Haas pacing a 15-hit attack, drive Charley Ruffing to the showers in the seventh and score the two winning runs off Murphy. Haas' ninth-inning single, his fourth hit, brought in Rip Radcliff with the tying run and put Appling in position to score the clincher.

1,000 Watch Redskins Practice at Fairlawn

Twenty-fiive Members Work Out on Anacostia Field Under Coach Ray Flaherty; Battles and Rentner Due in Town Today.

By Bob Garrison.

Twenty-five strong, Chief George P. Marshall's tribe of Redskins, Washington's first entry into the National Professional Football League, pitched their wigwams on the heavily sodded field at Anacostia yesterday, and as braves on the war path are wont to do, quickly went into their war dance.

Leaden skies and damp grass failed to wash the paint away and when their field leader, Ray Flaherty led the redmen from the scene of activity, late in the afternoon, they had given the 1,000 spectators who gathered to see the transplanted footballers work out, a real show.

Any harbored belief that this game of professional football is played by a group of hog-fat hasbeens was dispelled by the athletes as they rolled, trotted, groaned and puffed through two lengthy conditionin sessions. Before the day was over, Flaherty had his charges punting, passing and charging short distances.

Boss Watches.

As big chief Marshall sat on the sidelines, the boys shouted their delight at being once more on close terms with the pig-skin, and went to such length to outdo each other in the handling of the medicine ball that spectators held their breath as they watched huge linesmen sock it against the shoulders of the man next in line as they kept it in motion for 15 minutes at a time.

Flaherty, himself, with the aid of Ray Baker, assistant coach, was right in the middle of things, taking calesthentics with the boys, passing to his men, and personally directing the every move of the giants with whom he hopes to bring a championship to the Capital.

Battles, Rentner Due.

Wayne Millner, holdout, who came to terms shortly before noon, donned sweat-shirt, pants and cleats to participate in the afternoon workout. The former All-American end at Notre Dame University appeared to be well pleased with the terms of his contract, continually smiling and joshing with Flaherty. They consented to pose for photographers when the squad went into a see-saw exercise, rocking each other from their feet by a bend of the trunk.

After the workout, General Manager Jack Epsey announced that Cliff Battles, venerable ball carrier, and his buddy, Pug Rentner, who are still considered as holdouts, are expected to arrive here today to discuss terms.

Travis Goes Hitless, Out of 'Big Six'

By the Associated Press.

Charley Gehringer, "old reliable" of the Detroit Tigers, strengthened his grip on first place in the American League batting race yesterday with four hits in nine tries against the Athletics. He picked up two points, to go to .383, while his closest pursuers, Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig, of the Yankees, dropped off and into a tie for second place at .367. Cecil Travis, Nats shortstop, went hitless and dropped out of the "big six." Only Paul Waner, of the Pirates, was active in the National League. The big six (top three in each league):

Endeavour II Race Winner

Defeats Endeavour I Off Newport; Ranger Takes King's Cup Event.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 24.—Sailing Ranger, his third defender of the America's Cup, Harold S. Vanderbilt today for the fifth time, won the annual race for the King's Cup, defeating Chandler Hovey's Rainbow and Gerard B. Lambert's Yankee.

Ranger's victory was all the more impressive because she e nost overtook T. O. M. Sopwith's recently defeated second challenger of the America's Cup, Endeavour II, although the latter started more than 25 minutes earlier in another race.

The Vanderbilt sloop crossed the finish line, after a 27.5-mile leeward-windward sailing contest, only eight seconds astern of the Britisher, which was matched against Sopwith's first Endeavour, his unsuccessful challenger of three years ago.

Sopwith, by defeating the old boat more than six minutes, won his first race in American waters with his second challenger, and a special prize offered by Commodore W. A. W. Steward, of the New York Yacht

Favorites Advance in Girls' Golf

Dot Traung, Mrs. Hill Lead Field in Western Play.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Aug. 24.—Favorites breezed through first round-matches in the thirty-seventh annual Women's Western Golf Tournament at Town and Country course today.

Leading the highly favored players to the front were Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, defending champion, who turned back Harriett Randall, Indianapolis city champion, 3 and 2, and Mrs. Opal Hill, of Kansas City, medalist, who defeated Muriel Veatch, of Portland, Oreg., 4 and 3.

Miss Traung's second-round opponent tomorrow will be Betty Botterill, of Salt Lake City, Utah's State champion. Miss Botterill vanquished Virginia Lindblad, of Chicago, 3 and 2, in a first-round match.

Mrs. Hill, long a veteran of national and international links competition, faces one of the strongest contenders in the tournament, Marian Miley, of Cincinnati, in the second round. Mrs. Miley beat Shirley Ann Johnson, Chicago, 4 and 3, today.

Missing of a putt less than a foot long on the nineteenth hole spelled defeat for Virginia Ingram, of Chicago, one of the leaders in Monday's qualifying round. She lost to Paula Parker, Milwaukee star.

Wednesday Miss Parker meets Mrs. Ella Mae Williams Cutler, of Chicago, who won the day's largest margin in defeating Mrs. Lee Mida, of Chicago, 6 and 5.

Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis, finalist with Miss Traung a year ago, had a scare before being declared victor over Marion Callahan, of Madison, Wis., 2 and 1.

Minnesota Champion, Miss Barrett meets another State champion in Hilda Livengood, of Danville, Ill., in Wednesday's second round. Miss Livengood also experienced a tough first round battle before winning from Betty Mackemer, of Peoria, Ill., 1 up.

Patty Berg, Minneapolis favorite, made short of Mrs. Hayes Dansingburg, of Rochester, Minn., 4 and 3, and tomorrow meets Edith Estabrooks, the Dubuque, Iowa, girl who disposed of Goldie Bateson, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin State champion, by a similar margin.

Pacific Northwest titlist, Marian McDougall, of Portland, Oreg., eliminated Nadine O'Leary, of Bismarck, N. D., 3 and 1. Her second round opponent will be Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Chicago, winner by a 4 and 3 margin over Mrs. Hope Siegnious, Detroit. Mrs. Zech is the Chicago district titlist.

Rudy Hits 3 Homers as Tigers Win, 6-3; Lose, 9-8.

Detroit, Aug. 24.—The Detroit Tigers and Philadelphia Athletics divided a double bill here today as Rudy York, hard-hitting Detroit rookie catcher, blasted out three home runs. York hit his twenty-third and twenty-fourth of the season off Harry Kelley in the first game, which Detroit won 6 to 3, and touched Lynn Nelson for his twenty-fifth in the nightcap which the A's took, 9 to 8.

Emil Bildilli Batted to All Parts of Lot

Griffs Score 5 Runs in 5th Inning; Lewis Bangs Homer.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Aug. 24.—Unalarmed by the Browns' early-inning threats to score one run for each of the 947 customers in the park, the Nats gaited themselves nicely this afternoon and surged from behind to slap down the St. Louis club, 9 to 6.

The Browns came out fighting and jolted Wes Ferrell loose from two runs in the first inning and in the second they cuffed him for two more to take a 4-1 lead. But then, Ferrell and the Nats collectively, reformed suddenly and won the ball game.

The knock-kneed right-hander, who appeared in for an awful drubbing in those first two innings when the Browns belted him for seven hits, deflated the St. Louis boys with some near-perfect pitching for the next five frames during which he gave up only one hit

And the Nats, after picking up a run in the first inning and two more in the third, put a five-run crusher on young Emil Bildilli in the fourth inning to bounce into a game-winning 8-4 lead. Bildilli was facing major league batting for the first time in his career and undoubtedly was very much impressed. The French-Italian youth who came up from the defunct Terre Haute club, couldn't get anybody out in that fourth inning while the Nats were ringing that 5-run alarm.

Ferrell, himself, was no drawback to the Nats up there at the plate. He bashed out three hits that figured in five runs and pitched 3-hit ball for the last seven innings. It was a large afternoon for the big fellow who was recording his eighth victory of the season for the Nats.

The Nats couldn't get to first base against young Bildilli in the first inning and then the Browns started smacking Ferrell around. With two out, Vosmik doubled to right, clift singled to center, Bell pushed a hit through shortstop, Knickerbocker singled to left and the Browns had four straight hits and a 2-0 lead.

They bounced right back at Ferrell in the second inning when Lipscomb singled to center, Hemsley doubled to left and West singled to right to produce two more runs. And then they faded.

Freddie Sington produced the first Washington run—in the second inning. Joe Kuhel whistled a single to right and Sington brought him all the way home with a two-bagger to dead center that just grazed Sammy West's finger tips. And in the third inning, Ferrell opened up with a single which was very fortunate because a bit later Buddy Lewis walloped a long home run atop the rightfield roof to cut the Browns' lead to 4-3.

And then, in the fourth, the Washington boys truly went to work on the Bildilli—or is it Dilbilli—kid. Buddy Myer whammed a two-bagger high against the rightfield screen and Sington coaxed a walk out of the rookie. Walter Millies missed one attempt to bunt and then smacked a two-bagger to left that tied the score at 4-4

But the Nats weren't through with Bilbilli. Wes Ferrell banged a single to center and Sington and Millies were home. Mel Almada shot a double over first base and Ferrell dashed to third. Whereupon, Manager Jim Bottomley deduced that Bildilli was no success and got him out of there.

Old Elon Hogsett came in to pitch to the Nats and gave up two more runs when Lewis and Travis swatted a pair of lengthy flies to centerfield to score two pals from third base. Travis, incidentally, went for the horse collar today, as the players say. He didn't get on base in five trips to the plate and his .369 average took an awful sock.

After that five-run uprising in the fourth, Hogsett and Ferrell staged a pretty duel with Wes himself driving in the only other run that Hogsett allowed—in the eighth when his single scored Sington who had singled.

The Browns' bit into Ferrell's 9-4 lead with a two-run rally in the eighth, but the details really aren't important.

Race Horses to Open 10-Day Stand at Nearby Marlboro Track Today

High Hedge, Timber Lady Vie in Sprint

Muddy Track Likely; Post Time 2 P. M.; Entries Are Full.

By Walter Haight.

Horse racing, after firing at long range for some weeks, has wheeled its howitzers right up to Washington's sidedoor. This afternoon, the 10-day meeting at nearby Marlboro gets under way. The Prince Georges County session, doubled as the result of legislation passed by the State early this year, annually gives District turf fans an appetizer for the major fall racing season opening at Havre de Grace next month.

With post time set for 2 o'clock, Marlboro has plenty of everything, including mud on the racing surface. Racing Secretary Edward J. Brennan reports an overflow of horses. The entries for today reveal waiting lists in six of the seven events. With 350 horses stabled on the grounds, some 200 others are at nearby Bowie and will be vanned to the scene of action. Likewise, Marlboro is not lacking in jockeys. The riders who have been making the half-mile swing of Bel Air to Cumberland to Marlboro will be in action, including Sammy Palumbo, the half-mile champion.

Officials of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association have reason to believe this will be the record Marlboro meeting. Better horses than usual will compete for the purses. Cumberland broke all records at its session, which closed last Saturday, averaging better than $31,000 in daily wagering. Then again, the tightening of the grip on Washington bookmakers should work in Marlboro's favor.

General Manager Joseph B. Boyle expects new records for both attendance and wagering.

"With large profits apparently insured," Boyle said, "we have made many improvements. We have put new tarvia roofs on all of the barns; 400 new seats have been added to the grandstand; we have had a railroad spur built to the track so horses may be unloaded at the entrance to the grounds; the road from Marlboro has been resurfaced; the press box has been moved and new stationary starting gates have been placed in the chutes."

Boyle said the $3 combination tickets, sold for the first time in Maryland at Bel Air and continued at Cumberland, will not be sold here. The daily double will be on the first and third races instead of on the first and second, as is usual at other half-mile tracks.

A well-balanced program is scheduled. Four sprints and three distance races make up the card, featured by the running of the Upper Marlboro Purse, a test of 5½ furlongs for 3-year-olds and upward. The race will bring another clash of High Hedge and Timber Lady. They have beaten each other at previous meetings and appear to be the class of the seven entries. However, the promise of a muddy, if not heavy track, will move up several of the others.

The daily double will be a wagering feature as usual and will be conducted on the first and third races. The windows for this betting will close 10 minutes before post time of the first race.

MARY SENATE moved through on the inside in the opening three-sixteenths to gain slight advantage over TIME INTERVAL, surrendered command to MULTIMILLION, but responding willingly to hard riding, wore the latter down to draw clear at the line. MULTIMILLION moved up fast on the inside of the winner leaving the backstretch, gained slight lead and despite holding on gamely could not catch the winner. SETEMUP, well placed from the start, dropped back and came in the closing drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY BLONDE, $4.90, $3.60, $3.10; BE THERE, $7.70, $4.90; YANKEE SKIPPER, $4.40.

MY BLONDE began moving up on the outside in the run down the backstretch, took command when BE THERE went wide and continuing gamely, lasted to hold safe the closing challenge of BE THERE. The latter had speed from start, came wide at the stretch turn, and closing with a rush on the outside rail, just missed being up in time. YANKEE SKIPPER worked his way up steadily, loomed up threateningly straightening out in the stretch and closed stoutly.

DAILY DOUBLE, MARY SENATE AND MY BLONDE, PAID $35.80.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:20. Off 3:28. Winner, Mrs. M. S. Fox's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLEVER GIRL, $5.30, $3.20, $2.80; HALO, $3.70, $3.20; TARANTO, $4.10.

CLEVER GIRL followed along in closest attendance of the pace established by HALO until reaching the stretch, took command when the pacemaker began shortening strides and drew out at the last sixteenth. HALO took command at once, opened up a commanding lead and weakened after reaching the stretch, although never in danger of losing place. TARANTO was well placed all the way and unable to make up any ground in the closing drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:54. Off 3:57½. Winner, Mrs. C. Wyse's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CATCHALL, $8.80, $4.30, $3.10; ACAUTAW, $3.70, $3.00; JOLYON, $4.30.

CATCHALL was prominent all the way, met determined opposition from ACAUTAW, and drew out through the last three-sixteenths. ACAUTAW was forwardly placed throughout, made repeated efforts to get to the leader, but was not good enough, although continuing with good courage to the close. POLYON, unable to keep pace early, came with good energy.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. The Rockland. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:24. Off 4:26. Winner, F. L. Plander's ch. g. (5), by Chance Play—Mary Jane. Trained by R. McElvain. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 1:46 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHANCE KING, $8.20, $4.40, $3.20; BUILDING TRADES, $4.50, $3.30; CORUM, $8.50.

CHANCE KING moved up gradually in the last half mile, moved up steadily on the inside when reaching the stretch, and taking command when BUILDING TRADES swerved, held away to the close. BUILDING TRADES followed along in closest pursuit of the early pace, moved up to take command after passing the three-furlong pole, drew into a good lead and but for swerving through the last sixteenth would probably have lasted. CORUM closed stoutly on the outside.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:53. Off 4:56½. Winner, M. E. Syufy's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLIND BROOK, $5.80, $3.20, $2.70; ALMAHA, $5.90, $4.30; STAR SCOUT, $4.20.

BLIND BROOK, away slowly, went into contention when reaching the backstretch, wore down ALMAHA for the lead when reaching the stretch and drew out steadily. ALMAHA outran his field to the first turn, was rated along in front and while unable to go along with the leader, continued with good energy to the end. STAR SCOUT moved up gamely when reaching the stretch, although unable to close any ground through last furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:23. Off 5:26. Winner, R. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANPRA, $8.80, $4.30, $3.40; GREY SHOT, $8.20, $4.70; ORTHOPRISM, $4.70.

CANPRA moved up gradually after straightening out on the backstretch, responded gamely to pressure and wearing down GREY SHOT in the stretch, drew out in the last furlong. GREY SHOT was prominent all the way, went to the front when CANPRA began shortening strides and held on well to the end, although unable to withstand the winner's bid. ORTHOPRISM moved up fast nearing the far turn, although unable to close any ground in the stretch drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:53. Off 5:54½. Winner, Mrs. G. ALMARINE was slightly restrained while holding to a forward position, responded gamely on the outside through the stretch, getting up in the closing stride to wear down STARWICK. The latter moved up on the inside leaving the backstretch, took command before reaching the stretch and just failed to last. COUNT ME was prominently placed from the start, met determined opposition from CHURCH CALL, but unable to keep pace with the first two in the closing test.

Budge-Mako Defeat Harman-Toley in Defense of National Doubles Title

This Morning

Sington Sees Pro Grid Berth.

By Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, Aug. 24.

Strictly personal: Until the base hits started bouncing off his bat a few days ago, despondent Freddie Sington was seeking Clark Griffith's permission to accept a football contract with the Washington Redskins . . . Alabama's All-American tackle of 1930 today renewed acquaintances with Dr. Wilbur Bohm, trainer of the Washington State football team which Alabama beat in the Rose Bowl, 24 to 0 . . . Alabama, after being held scoreless for one quarter, scored three touchdowns in eight minutes . . playing opposite Sington in that game was Turk Edwards, the 265-pound all-pro tackle now with the Redskins . . . when he graduated from Alabama, Sington was offered $7,500 to sign a wrestling contract . . . the promoter promised to make him champion within a year . . . which, in wrestling, is not impossible.

Manager Bucky Harris is burning at Pitcher Pat Malone, of the Yankees . . . who, according to Harris, reached up to his mouth between pitches, got a handful of saliva and struck out Buddy Lewis with the outlawed spitball last week in Yankee Stadium . . . the ball curved a foot . . . which recalls the old complaint against Rube Walberg, of the Athletics and Yankees . . who, the players say, would wipe his sweating brow with his pitching hand and use the moisture to give the ball the same effect as saliva . . . Fred Marberry could do things to the stitches of a ball simply by squeezing the cover between his powerful hands.

The most interesting team in the minor leagues is Washington's Salisbury, Md., club of the Eastern Shore circuit . . . which was forced to forfeit 21 victories at the start of the season on account of using an ineligible player . . . and is now only a half game behind the league lead . . . George Camellas, one of the club's pitchers, recently lost his first game of the season after winning 20 straight . . . he was beaten, 2-1, when he uncorked two wild pitches . . . but, incredible as it may seem, Camellas with his 20 straight wins, is not Salisbury's best pitcher . . . that distinction belongs to a right-hander named Kohlman who lost his first start of the season and since then has won 21 straight.

Washington's No. 1 fan is a former sandlotter by the name of J. Frederick Herring . . . who has traveled to Boston, Philadelphia, New York and Cleveland expressly to see the Nats play this season . . . he has missed only three home games this year, but he hastens to add it wasn't his fault . . . those three days he spent selling his trucking business so he would have more time to watch baseball . . . Herring traveled to Boston last week-end at an expense of approximately $35 to see the double-header between the Nats and the Red Sox . . . and traveled right back again when the games were rained out.

• • • •

Washington's best-dressed ball player, Wesley Ferrell, is a push-over for necktie salesmen . . . he bought no less than 18 from a necktie vender in the Nats' hotel lobby this morning . . . most of 'em as gaudy as a Louis XIV tapestry. Al Simmons, who is known around the circuit as Duke Simmons, is the club's best story-teller . . . he adlibbed a radio program from the White Sox dugout after the home games for two years . . . his radio sponsors are burning up at husky Louis Gehrig, whose boner on the air three weeks ago was one of the classic mistakes of all time . . . publicizing, as it did, over a coast-to-coast hookup, the product which was the chief rival of his sponsors' breakfast cereal . . . when Gehrig attempted to explain later to the press that it was a natural mistake because he had indorsed Wheaties all last season before he signed to indorse Huskies, it served only to cheapen indorsement advertising.

• • • •

It finally happened . . . at Sacramento, Jack Powell, a Pacific Coast League umpire, was arrested on the field for being drunk . . . by two burly cops who strode on the diamond in the sixth inning, after Powell had been calling weird decisions all day, and took charge of the umpire . . . but not until after Powell put up a furious battle during which the 4,000 fans were on the side of the cops . . . he was taken to the city jail and booked on an intoxication charge . . . Second Baseman Jimmy Reese, of the San Diego club, bailed him out.

Bill Terry's new contract for 1939 and '40 calls for $42,500 per annum . . . it was Terry who suggested that the Bees' Bill McKechnie would make a good manager for the Cleveland Indians . . . which is how the rumor started . . . the Brooklyn ownership's delay in offering Burleigh Grimes a new managerial contract is taken to mean that Grimes is through . . . Rabbitt Maranville, who has the Montreal club in second place in the International, is a candidate for the job . . . as is Rogers Hornsby, who is now convinced that baseball and the ponies do not jell well.

Other U. S. Team Bows To Germans

Von Cramm and Henkel Win Over Murphy and Fitch.

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 24. Don Budge and Gene Mako, America's invincible Davis Cup doubles combine, today opened the defense of their National Doubles Championships by romping over two fellow-Californians, Bobby Harman and George Toley, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—1, 6—2, in the first round.

Budge and Mako, who retained their Newport casino honors by coming from behind against G. Patrick Hughes and Charles E. Hare, of England, Saturday, for a hard-earned five-set victory, appeared to have boosted their game several notches over the week-end.

They breezed through the first two sets and would have taken the third one in as easy fashion if Mako, starting with a 4-love lead, had not faltered and dropped his service in the fifth game. Toley then held but, after Budge had run the score to 5-2 on his delivery, Harman was forced to yield the next game.

Baron Gottfrid Von Cramm and Henner Ernest Otto Henkel, the famous German doubles team, got off to a spotty start, when they made their American debuts against the Bostonians, Dick Murphy and Sam Fitch. The German Davis Cup players lost the first game, when Von Cramm double-faulted twice, and both played ragged tennis to drop the second set. The invaders however, settled down after that and advanced on a 6—3, 5—7, 6—2, 6—2 victory.

Norman Bickel and Nobert Burgess, the Chicago team, shared the same second round bracket with the Germans, the top-seeded foreign entry, when they overcame H. Holbrook Hyde and John Gow, of Hartford, Conn., the New England sectional titlists, 3—6, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3.

In the nearest thing to an upset, John McDiarmid, of Princeton, N. J., and Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., seeded sixth and last on the American list, were eliminated, after a keen battle by the unranked young Britishers, Murray Delaford and Clarence Jones, 7—5, 7—5, 4—6, 6—3.

All the favored women's teams followed the defending titlists, Carolin Babcock, Los Angeles, and Mrs. John Van Ryn, Austin, Tex., into the second round without serious opposition.

The only other first-day surprise was the uphill battle of Bobby Riggs, regarded as the most promising youngster of the season, and his Los Angeles townsman, Bernie Coghlan, who were seeded fifth, in overcoming Louis Wetherell, Los Angeles, and Robert Kamrath, Austin, Tex., 0—6, 4—6, 6—4, 9—7, 8—6.

Rain Delays Tennis Play

For the second straight day matches in the two current local tennis tournaments, the Government men's play and the Women's District Tennis League tourney, were postponed because of rain and wet grounds.

The Federal tournament, in which Tony Latona is defending the crown he won last year, will continue today, weather permitting, on the Potomac Park courts. Meanwhile, the women's play, which is now in the semifinal round, will be resumed on the Rock Creek Reservoir courts.

Ray Stocklinski, No. 2, and Bob Bradley, No. 8, are holding a one-round lead on the field in the clerks' play, having passed through the third round, but Latona, seeded No. 1, is right on their heels, being scheduled to play Carroll Huls today in the third round.

In the women's play, Willie O'Steen, seeded No. 3, meets Mrs. Katherine Baker, and Mary Ryan, No. 2, opposes Gertrude Smith at 5 p. m.

MacFayden Lost To Bees for Year

Sam Snead Visited— Between Exhibitions

Golf's Longest Hitter Paid a Brief Visit to the District; Is on His Game, and Left a Fine Impression.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Sam Snead dropped into town yesterday, en route to Rochester where he plays an exhibition match today. He took in a movie, had dinner with Wiffy Cox, and left an impression that golfdom's biggest money winner of the year is still a modest West Virginian who took advantage of a good golf game.

The game's longest hitter is on his way from West Virginia, where he tucked away the State Open title with a record-breaking 268, for the second year in a row, passing up the rich Lake Placid event to defend his crown and visit his family in Hot Springs, Va.

The good-looking, powerful linksman, whose success in his freshman year is unprecedented in the history of the game, has a busy fall schedule ahead that includes today's match and another in Syracuse tomorrow, then the Glen Falls Open, Hershey, Canadian Open, Belmont match play event and then the winter tour, with other exhibitions sandwiched in between.

Stopped at Kenwood.

Dinner at Kenwood was the closest Sammy got to a golf club yesterday. It was only the second day this summer that he hasn't practiced or played, and he claims to be a mighty tired young man.

The 25-year-old brunet won his biggest event of the year two weeks ago, the St. Paul Open, and added it to his Oakland and Bing Crosby tourney victories, but he's been runner-up in a half dozen that include his great bid in the National Open that was second only to Ralph Guldahl's record breaking score.

Sam hasn't been over 74 this year except for his pre-Ryder Cup matches when he was off the stick just long enough to be left out of the doubles matches. He was ill on the way over and claims that shuffle-board on shipboard left him with a bad hook, caused from pushing the shuttle. He also developed a bad putting streak on the tricky English greens.

At this time last year he was just a youngster who had won the West Virginia Open for his first main title. He attributes his success to a study of his game after a few tournaments that found him in fourth or fifth place, taking an inventory of his shots, and eliminating the unnecessary ones in the later events.

On Winter Tour.

Sam'll take the winter trek with his barnstorming fellow professionals, making his debut in some tourneys and his second visit in others. He is still serving his apprenticeship in these events but with his experience he will be awfully tough to beat, as a lack of it cost him at least two first money's last year.

The Guldahl-Snead exhibition duo is making a good trip, financially as well as good golf, and have yet to be defeated, although they've split in several matches. Sam rattled off his last five scores in Ohio matches, 67, 68, 72, 66, 67, as nonchallantly as shooting a 90.

Sam's favorite in the current national amateur is no exception—it's Johnny Goodman, although he likes the defending titleholder, Johnny Fisher and Frank Strafaci next in order.

He modestly answered the question as to his tremendous driving power that he was consistently past Ralph Guldahl in their matches and any other pros in the foursome, and that he's been hitting them that far since he won a driving contest as a high school freshman.

It was train time so Champion Snead climbed aboard, promised he'd try and make it for the Kenwood exhibition following the Canadian Open and with a final wave of his hand was off to Rochester, Syracuse, Buffalo and points North, a good golfer—and a swell guy.

Pros to Add Three Events to Schedule

Purses, places and dates for the District Open, assistant pros' championship and pro-amateur title play will be ironed out when the local professionals meet at Indian Spring on Friday to discuss plans for the events that are marked as fixtures on the calendar.

The assistant pros' play has been abandoned for the past three years, but added interest among the assistants merits an event. It may be changed from a medal to medal and match play event. The pro-amateur affair, on a championship basis, will be an innovation to the schedule.

The District Open plans call for a bigger and better event than heretofore that finds George Diffenbaugh as defending champion for the past two years. A pro sweepstakes event is carded after the meeting.

Sandlot Pick-ups

By Jack Munhall.

WASHINGTON'S TYPOS played host to ten cities in the recent twenty-seventh annual International Union Printers Baseball Tournament, but the locals certainly did not let mock hospitality prevent them from running away with honors, both team and individual . . . MANAGER RAY HOMAN led his nine to the championship in a thrilling finish, defeating New York in both ends of a doubleheader when one loss would have resulted in elimination . . . GEORGE MOSEDALE, game pitcher, was awarded a medal symbolic of the tournament's outstanding player on the strength of his remarkable performance in pitching both victories against the Gothamites in the crucial closing games and his record of three wins and no defeats . . . JIMMY DEWHURST, leftfielder, won the individual batting championship when he connected for four hits in his last nine appearances at the plate . . . and in an unofficial poll of the players PHIL BOUNDFORD, Washington's lanky shortstop, was adjudged tops at his position . . . PHIL batted over .500 and in the field was charged with but one error while covering a wide territory in scintillating fashion . . .

FRANK CINOTTI, with the competent assistance of VIC GAUZZA, has nearly selected his entire all-star squad which will meet the strong Bureau of Investigation nine in a benefit game at Griffith Stadium September 11 . . . the contest suggested and arranged by CINOTTI will be played to raise money to help defray heavy hospital expenses incurred by TONY BARRUTO, well-known sandlot manager of other days who has been very ill for several months . . .

Present plans call for a small but versatile squad with perhaps not more than 12 or 15 men to be honored so that all may be able to actively engage in the game . . . So far ten players have been definitely named and several others will be chosen before the end of the week . . . Those chosen and whose acceptance is awaited are . . . CHARLEY BOOKER and WALTER MURPHY, pitchers and outfielders with Rose Liquor in the National City League and also with week-day league clubs . . . MURPHY plays with HOLC in the governmental loop . . . BOOKER with O'Donnell in the Industrial League. Infielders EDDIE CINOTTI, of O'Donnell and Rose, and FRED NAU, of Rose . . . Outfielders VIC GAUZZA, JR., of Joe Harris Senate Beer, and JOE FRESCHI, of O'Donnell and Greenbelt . . . Catcher HUCK WYNNE of Labor and Annapolis is a sure bet to take one of the two backstopping posts and the other will be either QUENTIN GABRIELLI of WPA and Rose or HENRY GICHNER of O'Donnell and Joe Harris, Senate Beer . . . Others who have been chosen are LEFTY STEVENS, usually a pitcher with O'Donnell, LEFTY JEWETT, a pitcher, infielder and outfielder with PWA and Annapolis . . . One or possibly two more infielders will be added and one is expected to be slugging JOE PUSATERI, Rose third baseman . . .

Cox Demands New Referee

Bortnick Favors Dusek Tribe, Says Matman.

Accusing Referee Bennah Bortnick of showing downright favoritism toward the Duseks, Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, yesterday informed promoter Joe Turner he would not go through with tomorrow night's match with Rudy Dusek at Griffith Stadium unles a neutral referee is secured.

Cox meets Dusek, and Jack Patterson faces Henri Piers in the double wind-up program.

Cox claims that in the match he lost to Dusek at the ball park a few months ago he was the victim of "too quick a count, and also Bortnick's partiality toward a Dusek."

The Kansan informed Turner he has always been given a "raw deal" by Bortnick in headline matches against a Dusek, and thus demanded another referee.

"Unless you keep Bortnick out of my matches Rudy will be sorry he ever entered the ring with me," Cox informed Turner.

In supporting bouts on the ladies' night program tomorrow, Chief Thunderbird meets Eli Fischer, Walter Podolock tackles Bintre LaRue, and Mayes McLain faces Mike Sterlich. All women will be admitted free.

Reis Will Race.

Bolton, Landing, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP).—El Lagarto, the 15-year-old speedboat that has won three legs on the gold cup, will make an attempt to regain the prized speed trophy at Detroit on Labor Day owner-driver, George Reis, announced tonight.

Sopwith Decides to Challenge Again!

By the United Press.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 24.—T. O. M. Sopwith, undismayed by two defeats in the America's Cup yachting series, said today he hoped to make a third challenge for the trophy, probably within three or four years when English designers catch up with the Americans.

"I have enjoyed the season here thoroughly," said Sopwith, "and I should like to race again for the America's Cup. I would like to point out, however, that this is a matter between clubs, and I cannot say anything with authority in this regard."

The cup is held by the New York Yacht Club, whose defender, Harold S. Vanderbilt, defeated Sopwith four straight in the series held off Newport early this month. Sopwith's two challenges—this year and in 1934—were sponsored by the Royal Yacht Squadron. The Royal Club must issue the challenge when and if Sopwith decides to try again.

Late Selling Erases Early Wheat Gains

Chicago Advance Follows Higher Prices in Liverpool.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—The wheat price recovery failed to make headway today in the face of persistent commercial selling to prevent losses in handling the marketing of spring wheat. Prices shot up 1½ cents in the first 20 minutes on buying credited to Eastern sources and held the upturn fairly well until the final hour, when the gain was wiped out.

An advance of 1½ to 1⅝ cents at Liverpool, based partly on reports of needed rains in Argentina and on importer and miller buying of futures and Russian and Australian wheat, influenced some buyers here.

July Milk Sales Ahead of Year Ago

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Consumption of fluid milk continued to increase during July, daily average sales rising 1.2 per cent over July, 1936, the Milk Industry Foundation reported today. July average daily sales were placed at 6,653,940 quarts against 6,500,178 a year ago. Average production was approximately the same as in July, 1936.

Pay rolls of milk distributing companies increased 10.9 per cent over July last year and employment gained 4.55 per cent.

Building Rise Likely Despite Higher Costs

July Contracts Largest for Any Month Since April, 1931.

New York, Aug. 24. — Recent building statistics indicate that undue concern is being felt over the restricting effects of higher construction costs on building activity, according to an analysis of the situation by the Standard Statistics Co. today. Construction contracts for July expanded contra-seasonally and were the largest for any month since April, 1931. While these, of course, included many types of contracts which are not influenced importantly by cost fluctuations, it is encouraging to note that the proportion of total allotments financed by non-governmental funds increased to over 43 per cent in July, from less than 41 per cent in June.

Residential and non-residential commitments expanded sufficiently in July to offset a decline of 19 per cent in combined public works and utility contracts and lift the total value of awards for the month some 9 per cent above July, 1936. Although the year-to-year gain of 13 per cent in residential undertakings in July was less than that of previous months, this reflected largely the marked contra-seasonal gain a year ago.

As residential awards last year continued upward to a peak in August, against the seasonal trend, it would not be surprising if contracts for the current month were moderately below the year-earlier level. However, with the supply demand relationship favorable and construction costs now tending to level off, awards for the remainder of 1937 should make a better-than-seasonal comparison with earlier months this year.

The outlook for the non-residential division is also promising, although it is hardly likely that the gain in coming months will maintain the rate of July, when awards were 44 per cent higher than a year before.

Foreign Markets.

London, Aug. 24 (AP).—Transatlantic issues closed with losses running as much as 3 points, and Japanese bonds were nominally quoted 3 to 4 points lower. Gilt-edged securities and German bonds held steady, while distilling issues advanced. Heaviness prevailed in the mining and industrial groups.

Paris.—The bourse closed with a mixed tone, railroad stocks being lower on the upward side. Government bonds were in demand, rentes closing with gains of 25 to 88 centimes. Royal Dutch declined 43 francs and Suez Canal was 70 francs lower.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed 1⅛d to 1½d net higher. Buying of nearby futures by a large importer and purchases of Russian and Australian wheat by millers were contributing factors on the advance. Feder selling was absorbed by light investment and Bombay buying in today's cotton market, and futures closed 1 to 3 points lower.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stock Trading Decreases and Selling Subsides After Early Weakness.

New York, Aug. 24.—Somewhat better conditions prevailed in financial markets. Nervousness was less evident in the Government bond market; stocks were somewhat less active and firmer, closing with nothing worse than irregularity and with numerous fractional advances. Cotton hardened, but grains barely held. September wheat lost an eighth of a cent at $1.04⅞ a bushel.

Stocks were not active enough to show a trend. Strength at times was shown in some groups and in a number of miscellaneous issues, but no leadership, as the brokers say, appeared. Steel sold at a new low price and then rallied above the previous closing level. Westinghouse, General Electric and Zenith Radio hardened. The majority of the rails slipped a fraction, as did the motors and oils, but they improved in late trading.

With bonuses in the air and on the way to the good earth some traders saw no reason for bearishness on the farm implement shares. International Harvester moved up a point. Metal stocks were steady.

Government bonds were quiet with a firmer tone, in spite of the new low prices paid for some of the rail bonds and the weakness in Japanese issues. While it is the opinion here that New York banks scarcely will make use of a lower discount rate (if they get it) to borrow funds, in lieu of selling or allowing to mature their low-yield holdings of Government obligations, since that would be an expensive way of doing business, the determination of the authorities to put down discount rates probably gives some reassurance to small banks. They at least are being told that the authorities are determined to maintain easy money so long as they can, inflation or no inflation.

Loans Increase.

Changes in condition of New York City reporting member banks, revealed in their statement as of last Wednesday, dominated the statement for member banks in 101 cities as of August 18. So-called business borrowings increased $29,000,000 in this city and $32,000,000 for all reporting banks; Government securities held increased $16,000,000 here and $22,000,000 at all reporting banks, while Government guaranteed securities were down $29,000,000 in this city and $37,000,000 in all reporting banks.

Apparently local institutions and many out-of-town banks replaced about half of their maturing Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds with Treasury bills or bonds. "Other securities" were $12,000,000 down at San Francisco, $5,000,000 in New York and $29,000,000 in the country at large. "Other loans" were $9,000,-000 lower in Chicago but only $6,000,-000 lower in the 101 cities. There were moderate increases in demand deposits, a rise of $34,000,000 in Government deposits reflecting bank subscriptions by book credit to one of the weekly $50,000,000 Treasury bill issues. Reserves increased $72,-000,000 and bank borrowings, an item of some interest in view of Federal Reserve rediscount rate cuts, were down $4,000,000 to $39,000,000.

Small Rise in Discounts.

The student of the weekly banking statistics would expect to find banks borrowing extensively in the Atlanta, Chicago and Minneapolis Federal Reserve districts, where rate reductions have just been made to enable banks to borrow in order to forestall sales of their investment. Yet, on the weekly statement as of August 18, the banks of the Chicago and Minneapolis districts are borrowing nothing, while in Atlanta they are $4,000,000 in debt. Of the $39,000,000 borrowings of all reporting banks, $30,000,000 is by banks in New York.

Meanwhile the heavy fall in Government bond prices last week has forced the Treasury to abandon its intention of borrowing new money on September 15. It announced today that only maturities would be met with new issues, an operation which can be carried through because the current yield on the maturing issues is below the coupon rate. Issuance of additional bonds would nevertheless, the Treasury seems to fear, further upset the market, which has not been greatly reassured by the discount rate cutting now in full swing and which is expected to reach New York on Thursday of this week. The Treasury on its current bill issue has had to pay a much stiffer rate than that in effect a week ago. The short term money market has hardened along with the long term market.

Orthodoxy

Circumstances are beginning to act in some ways to force the Treasury into a more regular financial policy than it has been inclined to hold. The regular issues of discount bills, a familiar feature of the fiscal landscape for the last few years, are regarded as "tax anticipation" bills. They are placed not as long-term loans, but merely as temporary advances in anticipation of revenues certain to come in. It has long been the practice of the Treasury nevertheless when the bills matured, instead of using revenue money to retire them, to fund them into longer term notes and bonds, thus continually adding to the public debt.

Market Power.

In the next tax date financing the Treasury will retire with its own tax cash $350,000,000 of the maturing discount bills. It will borrow no new money at that time. It will refund only an issue of $817,000,000 of notes. The one and only force at work is that of fright over the Government bond market. By avoiding new cash borrowing some reassurance is given. By paying off instead of funding the maturing bills no further drain on excess reserves of the banks is made and therefore no further hardening of the money market will be caused. It was observed early in the game of high spending and deficit financing by means of bank credit that ultimately the New Dealer sleepwalkers would be brought to their senses by the refusal of the market to go any further into the darkness. That time seems to be rapidly approaching.

Pure Oil.

To satisfy a provision of the Ohio laws, Pure Oil Co. is offering new common stock directly to stockholders, concurrently with an offer of 5 per cent convertible preferred, but it is unlikely that any will elect to make the direct purchase of common unless the market improves considerably before September 24. The conversion price for the preferred is $22.22 2-9 and that also is the price at which stockholders are permitted to subscribe directly to the common. When the directors were meeting yesterday to fix the terms Pure Oil was selling around $19.50 a share.

Swift & Co. Is Sued For Yearbook $3,000

Chicago, Aug. 24 (AP).—Attorney Robert Kewley, Swift & Co. stockholder, filed suit in superior court today against the packing concern's board of directors for recovery of $3,000 which he alleged was spent by them for yearbooks issued by the Democratic national committee. The bill asked that the corporation be restrained from further contributing to the campaign funds of political parties.

Shoe Chains Split on Price Policy for Fall

A.S.Beck Corp. Announces Reduction; Thom McAn to Maintain Advance.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 24.—The shoe trade generally indicated today that present shoe prices will be maintained, in some instances advanced, despite a radical cut in prices of women's shoes by A. S. Beck Shoe Corporation, operator of 100 stores in the East and Midwest. The Beck company, which marked up tags on women's shoes to $4.45 a pair from $3.98 last May, yesterday dropped the price back down to $3.98.

Officials said the restoration of the old price was "to attract new customers and increase pairage." They said Beck stores anticipated that increased sales will offset the price reduction without greatly increasing overhead. Desire of the company to expand volume of sales, rather than any customer resistance that might have developed out of the mark-ups last May, chiefly motivated the return to the old price level, they added.

Thom McAn Shoe Co., which increased prices of women's shoes to $3.95 from $3.65 a pair on August 9, because of higher costs, will maintain the price advance, despite the Beck reduction. It was asserted that the McAn company, which operates but 80 women's shoe stores, against 600 stores selling men's and boys' shoes, will announce an increase in the men's and boys' lines this week.

Wise Shoe Co., with 26 stores in the East and Midwest, will stick to its $3.98 price for women's shoes, despite advances or reductions by other shoe concerns, officials said.

June Power Revenue 8.9 Per Cent Over 1936

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Total revenue from ultimate consumers of electric light and power in June was $178,538,700, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. This is an increase of 8.9 per cent over June, 1936. Total revenue for the 12 months ended June 30 was $2,-134,371,300 against $1,972,559,800 for the preceding 12 months, an increase of 8.2 per cent.

Total production of electric energy by the industry in June was 9,563,-250,000 kilowatt hours as against 8,505,603,000 in June, 1936, an increase of 12.4 per cent. Production in the 12 months ended June 30 was 112,273,385,000 kilowatt hours, up 13.9 per cent from the 98,569,896,000 in the preceding 12 months.

Life Insurance Sales.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 24.—Life insurance sales throughout the United States for July were 3 per cent less than for the same month last year, according to the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau. Sales for the first seven months of the year were 6 per cent ahead of those for the corresponding months of 1936, the report states.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 24.—The first half of this year saw another record in shoe production the total topping the first six months of 1936 by 19½ per cent. The low retail price of shoes has stimulated sales and production, but the low prices have meant profitless prosperity for many manufacturers.

Bob Burns Says—

I want'ta say that I firmly believe that the right person for you to marry is waitin' for you if you'll just take the time and patience to look.

My stingy uncle had been correspondin' with a woman that he'd met through a matrimonial column. Finally one afternoon, he sent her a wire and asked her if she would marry him. All afternoon, he paced up and down the floor of the telegraph office, waitin' for a reply and finally, at about 8 o'clock that night, he got a telegram and she said, "Yes." The telegraph operator says, "Mister, I don't believe that's the right woman for you because it took her a long time to make up her mind." My uncle says, "No, that's just the woman for me—she waited for the night rate."

"INSPECTOR WADE"

City Refuses To Repay Fine To Envoy's Son

He Wants $12.50 but It Would Cost $35 to $50 to Pay It.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 24.—City Controller Robert White straightened out an international difficulty today and the State Department, the Peruvian Ambassador, the Governor of Pennsylvania and the Mayor of Philadelphia regretted that Felipe Tudela cannot get his $12.50 back.

Tudela is the son of Dr. Francisco Tudela, Peruvian diplomat now in Washington for talks with Secretary of State Cordell Hull about some South American business. He was arrested for speeding in Fairmount Park June 29. Magistrate S. Thomas Usilton thought a $10 fine plus $2.50 costs would be about right.

The fine started a series of formal letters from the elder Tudela to the Peruvian Embassy, to Secretary Hull, to Gov. George H. Earle and to Mayor S. Davis Wilson, who handed a memo to Controller White. All of the letters wanted to know what could be done about getting Felipe his $12.50 back, although Secretary Hull admitted he was not entitled to immunities granted an Ambassador.

In addition to the memo from the mayor, White found in his morning mail carbon copies of Tudela's letter to Hull, Hull's letter to the Governor, etc.

White spent the entire day reading the letters and conferring with Magistrate Usilton, who remarked that fines paid—unfortunately, or fortunately—were placed in the city treasury at once.

Already, white figured, the international situation had cost the interested parties $5.50 for postage and stationery. To extract the money from the city treasury, White calculated, it would cost much more, since there were only two steps that could be taken:

First, by a special appropriation ordinance of city council. It costs about $50 to prepare, print, advertise and pass such an ordinance.

Second, by mandamus proceedings. That costs $35.

So Controller White sent a letter to the mayor (carbon copies to Mr. Tudela, Secretary Hull, Gov. Earle, Magistrate Usilton et al.), informing him that the whole affair had better be forgotten.

Mayor Wilson indicated that he hoped it would.

74 Are Eliminated In Battle of 1,093 For Wood Estate

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Seventy-four of the 1,093 claimants in the Ida E. Wood $877,500 "sweepstakes" were eliminated today as Surrogate James A. Foley began sifting through musty records in an effort to find the legal heirs of the woman who kept her money in paper bags.

After a day of genealogical research which carried him back to 1846, Surrogate Foley ruled that only five of the 79 persons claiming kinship to Mrs. Wood's husband through a prior marriage could remain in the running.

In his preliminary ruling, the surrogate held that Mrs. Wood's husband, Benjamin, was married on March 2, 1846, to a Catharine Davidson, of Milford, Conn., who died shortly afterward. It was not until 1867 that he married Ida E. Wood.

As a result of his marriage to Catharine Davidson, Wood left two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, now living in New York and New Jersey, as his closest of kin, the surrogate held.

Pittsburgh's Girls 'Fussy Over Dates, Fraternity Learns

Pittsburgh, Aug 24 (AP).—The brothers of Delta Tau Delta find Pittsburgh girls "very fussy," but they're not going to go dateless.

John M. Cheffey and E. L. Sutton set up a dating bureau in a downtown hotel today to provide escorts for members of the National College Social Fraternity, who open their annual convention in Pittsburgh tomorrow.

Tape measure in hand, the young men measured young women who registered for dates.

The girls are particular, too. Most stipulated that their escorts be "tall, dark, handsome and good dancers."

One girl demanded that her date be single. Another asked for an Alabaman with a "cute drawl."

Rumanian Airman Will Solo Atlantic

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—An intensely serious Rumanian royal air force officer, Alexander Papana, explained today that he is going to fly the Atlantic alone next month to be sure he makes his own mistakes.

"With a companion," said the 30-year-old captain who plans a trip by air from New York to Bucharest, "one is likely to have a difference of opinion. But alone—well, if I come down at sea, that is my own fault entirely."

Papana will have every modern navigation and flying aid obtainable when he takes off from Floyd Bennet Field in a specially purchased trimotored Bellanca monoplane.

Alberta to Declare New Moratorium

Edmonton, Aug. 24 (AP).—(Canadian Press).—All corporations will be prevented from collecting debts in Alberta under an order-in-council, Premier Aberhart announced late today. It authorizes the second moratorium in the province, and will be signed tomorrow by Lieut. Gov. J. C. Bowen. The moratorium, will be in effect until March 1.

Anonymous Call Leads to Rescue Of Kidnaped Baby

Chicago, Aug. 24 (AP).—Baby Diane Lucas was found alive on the rear steps of an apartment house today just 23 hours after she was kidnaped in a crowded shopping district.

An anonymous telephone call to the central police station sent officers William O'Brien and Ben Smith in a squad car to the apartment building at 7400 North Damen avenue. They located the 3-year-old infant, clad in a white dress and wrapped in a white blanket, on the back steps.

A police department switchboard operator reported the voice of the person who gave the tip sounded like a boy's. She added: "He said he and some friends had been playing ball nearby and had seen someone leave a baby there."

Mrs. Dorothy Lucas left the baby in its carriage in front of a food store yesterday afternoon. When she returned after five minutes of shopping the youngster was gone.

Capt. Patrick O'Connell theorized the abductor was a woman with an "overwhelming maternal instinct."

Blonde's Vacation Studied in Slayings

Cincinnati, Aug. 24 (AP).—Assistant Prosecutor Frank Gusweiler sent a detective to Herrington Lake at Harrodsburg, Ky., tonight to investigate a vacation trip taken in June by Mrs. Anna Hahn, 31, held for the poison-deaths of George Gsellman, 67, and Jacob Wagner, 78.

State desired particularly to learn the identity of Mrs. Hahn's companions on the trip, the friends or acquaintances she may have made, and other details of her activities.

W. S. Gifford's Ex-Wife Dies in 11-Story Fall

New York Aug. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Florence P. Temple, former wife of Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., was killed today in a fall from her eleventh floor apartment in a West Fifty-seventh street hotel. Her marriage to Gifford ended in divorce in 1929.

Jury Weighs Fate Of Dyer in Killings

Los Angeles, Aug. 24 (AP).—A mixed jury began deliberations late today in the case of Albert Dyer, 32, former WPA school crossing guard, accused of murdering three young Inglewood girls and ravishing their bodies in a ravine last June 26.

In an atmosphere of tension just before the jury retired, Superior Judge Thomas White read a charge saying "your verdict should be either that the defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree or that he is not guilty."

In the State's final argument to the jury, Chief Deputy District Attorney William shouted:

"A fiend in man's clothing stood before the grand jury and said, 'I killed them. I defiled them,' and before a kindly judge he said 'I did it.'"

Simpson referred to Dyer's attempt to plead guilty at the time murder indictments against him were presented in open court.

She described transactions involving sums upward of $10,000. Mrs. Shelby is charged by her daughter with removing the $48,750 from their joint box. Part of the sum, the daughter paid, came from the sale of stocks and almost half of it she received as an inheritance.

Today's testimony included no reference to the celebrated 1922 murder mystery of William Desmond Taylor, one-time fiancee of Miss Minter.

Plaintiff Wins Judge's Tribute But Loses Case

Jurist Rules 'With Regret' Because of Claimant's Candor, Fairness.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 24.—The very witness-stand candor which won high praise from Federal Judge John M. Woolsey was responsible for the jurist's reluctant ruling against the plea of a prominent woman educator for a tax refund, according to the judicial decision made public today.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Lucy Sprague Mitchell, former dean of women at the University of California, had sued to recover $2,729 in income taxes paid in 1930, basing her claim upon losses suffered in real estate transactions. Testifying in her behalf was her husband, Dr. Wesley Clair Mitchell, professor of economics at Columbia University.

"I extremely regret to have to decide this cause against the plaintiff," wrote Judge Woolsey. "I was most impressed by the candor and fairness with which she and her husband gave their evidence.

"Again and again I asked questions purposely so phrased as to give them opportunity to shade their testimony in their own favor if they would, and never once did they do so.

"Such an exhibition of high-minded decency is so rare in court that it should not be permitted to pass without an expression of appreciation from the judge who had the pleasure of witnessing it."

The case revolved upon purchase of properties owned by Mrs. Mitchell which she permitted to be occupied for school purposes rent free. She later sold to school organizations, taking back mortgages for the full amount. The Government brought out that the law "permits deductions of losses only as to property purchased for the purpose of making a profit." As witnesses, both Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell refused to affirm "with absolute certainty," that her motive was solely philanthropic in purchasing the properties for school use. It was this "honest uncertainty" which cost them the suit—and won them Judge Woolseys' tribute.

Maniac Is Blamed In Girl's Kidnaping

Paris (Wednesray), Aug. 25 (U.P.).—Suggesting that Miss Jean Dekoven, missing American dancer, was the kidnap victim of a maniac, Le Journal said editorially today that theories that her disappearance was a publicity stunt or an escapade were not longer tenable.

The newspaper said the descriptions of a man who cashed travelers checks supposedly signed by Miss Dekoven, tallied with the description of a German with whom the girl had been friendly and who checked out of his hotel at the same time she disappeared a month ago.

$325,000 for Life Left to D. C. Man By Father's Will

Julius Brittlebank world traveler and father of Frank Brittlebank, of Washington, who died recently in Honolulu, bequeathed his $325,000 estate to Terre Haute and Mount Vernon, Ind., and Charleston, S. C., for the establishment of Brittlebank parks, the United Press reported last night.

The three equal portions will become available after the death of Brittlebank's sons, who is to receive income from the estate for the balance of his life, according to provisions of the will, filed for probate in Charleston.

Explaining the provisions, the will said Brittlebank "remembers Terre Haute, because it was his birthplace, Mount Vernon because it was the place of business of his only brother, and Charleston because it was his adopted city."

Brittlebank, a retired broker, stayed in Washington many times on his 17 world circling trips. It was in the course of his eighteenth round-the-world journey that he died.
